LIBER HORN

THE Liber Horn, preserved among the City's archives, is so called from Andrew Horn, a fishmonger of Bridge Street and for some years Chamberlain of the City, an office which he probably held at the time of his death in October, 1328. He was, moreover, a jurist of some repute, and is supposed by some writers to have been the author of the legal treatise known as Speculum Justiciariorum, or "Mirror of Justices," but this is open to question. However this may be, it is certain that he was addicted to legal studies, and more especially to the study of the laws and customs of the City of London, and, by his will proved and enrolled in the Court of Husting, he bequeathed various legal treatises to the City's Chamberlain, for the time being, to hold in trust for the Corporation.

The Liber Horn, in its present form, probably comprises two of the volumes thus bequeathed, viz.: one De veteribus legibus Angliæ, and another De statutis Angliæ, etc. It certainly consists of two separate works bound up together, the Liber Horn proper commencing on fo. ccvi. A fac-simile of this folio forms an appropriate frontispiece to this Calendar of Coroners Rolls, inasmuch as the King's Justices appear in an illuminated capital to be emblematically depicted as holding an Iter at the Tower of London, when it was the duty of Coroners, Sheriffs and other City officers to produce in court their Rolls for the period that had elapsed since the last Iter.

On the occasion of a memorable Iter held at the Tower in 1321 (lasting over 24 weeks and causing the citizens infinite vexation) Horn was a prominent figure, upholding the rights and privileges of the Commonalty, and especially of the fishmongers and their trade, with which he was personally familiar. It has been said that it was, probably, in view of this visit of the Justices that he drew up the Ordinaciones de Itinere, which appear in his book. in order to instruct the civic authorities as to the procedure to be followed in the reception of these unwelcome visitors ; and that the Ordinances were appropriated by John Carpenter, the City's famous Town Clerk, for his compilation of the Liber Albus, a century later.<sup>1</sup>

On the same folio is a rubricated heading testifying that the book belonged to Andrew Horn and stating the nature of its contents, and the date of its compilation, as follows :

Iste liber restat Andree Horn piscenarior London' de Breggestrete in quo continentur Carta et Alie consuetudines predictæ Civitatis, Et carta libertatis Angliæ et statuta per Henricum Regem et per Edwardum Regem filium predicti Regis Henrici edita.

TRANSLATION.

"This book belongs to Andrew Horn, fishmonger of Bridge Street, London, and contains the Charter and other customs of the said City, and the Charter of Liberty of England and statutes promulgated by Henry the King and by Edward the King, son of the aforesaid King Henry.

"He caused it to be made A.D. MCCCXI in the 5th year of the reign of King Edward, son of King Edward."

Suspended from a leafy twig in the ornamental border of the page is a shield bearing the arms of Horn depicted in heraldic tinctures, viz. : Az. a Saltire arg. between three leopards heads caboshed in chief and flanks or. and in base a luce hauriant of the last.

INTRODUCTION

THE nine Rolls here calendared appear to be the only original Coroners' Rolls of mediæval times preserved at the Guildhall.<sup>1</sup> They record inquests held in the City between A.D. 1300 and 1378 with various lacunæ, there being no record, for instance, of inquests for the years 1302-1320 and between 1340 and 1367. It is probable that they originally formed part of a series of similar Rolls which have long since disappeared. On the other hand, we find inquests for the years 1276-1278 recorded in one of the City's so-called "Letter-Books,"<sup>2</sup> but there is no evidence of them having been enrolled. That Rolls of Pleas of the Crown should have disappeared may be accounted for by the fact that they remained in the custody of the Officers appointed to "keep the pleas" for the time being, in the City, whether they were the King's Chamberlain or the Sheriffs. This was certainly the custom at the time of the memorable Iter at the Tower in 1321,<sup>3</sup> and the custom appears to have continued down to comparatively modern times.<sup>1</sup> At the present day the records of the Coroner's Court for the City of London and Borough of Southwark are in the custody of the Town Clerk.

<sup>1</sup> There exists one other Roll, but as it is of much later date (viz. : A.D. 1590) it has not been included in this Calendar. Roll I—the last of the series here calendared—records only four inquests (and these imperfectly), viz. : one in each of the years 1367, 1372, 1375 and 1378.

Guildhall MS. No. 126.

The Rolls here calendared are distinguished by the alphabetical letters A to I. A transcript and translation of the Rolls A, B, C, D, G, and I are preserved in what is known as Guildhall MS. No. 126 in the Guildhall Library. This MS. omits altogether Rolls E, F, and H, whilst supplementing the series with a transcript and translation of Inquests in the City for the year 1315-16 to be found among the archives in the Chapter House, Westminster. The volume forms one of the series of 51 volumes containing extracts from the Liber de Antiquis and other Records of the Corporation, as well as from the Pipe Rolls, Charter Rolls, and other Rolls, &c., preserved in H.M. Public Record Office and elsewhere. The series was compiled on behalf of Edward Tyrrell (City Remembrancer 1832-63) and was purchased by the Corporation in 1872.

The institution of a special officer to "keep" the Pleas of the Crown, under the name of Coronator or Coroner, dates back to A.D. 1194, or perhaps earlier<sup>2</sup>; but in the earliest "Rolls of the Crown" or "Rolls of felonies and misdemeanours" recorded in the City's Archives (viz. : those for the years 1276-8) the inquisitions, or inquests, were held by the King's Chamberlain in conjunction with the Sheriff or Sheriffs for the time being, the title of <sup>1</sup> See Report of Dr. F. Joseph Waldo, the City Coroner, to the Court of Common Council (presented 2nd March, 1911), wherein it is seen that Inquisitions taken before a former Coroner of the City were at one time kept at that Officer's private Chambers in Serjeants' Inn. Dr. Waldo has himself written an excellent paper on "The Ancient Office of Coroner" for the Medico-Legal Society.—See the Coroners' Society Annual Report 1910-11, Vol. IV, pp. 241-52.

Coroner not being once mentioned,<sup>1</sup> although the powers and duties of Coroners were specially defined by the Statute of 1276.

The King's Chamberlain, as distinguished from the City Chamberlain, played an important part in the Coronership of London, inasmuch as his office was usually combined with that of the King's Butler (Pincerna), one of whose duties was to take the King's duty or "prise" (Lat. prisa) on wines,<sup>2</sup> and to whom the Coronership of the City ex officio belonged.<sup>3</sup> The City's Liber Custumarum gives the names of seven King's Chamberlains between A.D. 1275 and 1320.<sup>4</sup> One of them, viz.: Matthew de Columbariis, or de Columbers, is recorded in an early Letter-Book as having been the King's Chamberlain and taker of his wines (captor vinorum) and, on that account, also Coroner of the City<sup>5</sup>; whilst two others, viz.: Gregory de Rokesle and Stephen de Abyndone, are recorded elsewhere as having filled the office of King's Butler, and therefore the Coronership of the City, whilst occupying the Mayoralty chair.<sup>6</sup>

These instances of the Coronership being held by the Mayor for the time being were, however, quite exceptional, the nearest approach to them in similarity being the case of John de Wengrave, who was elected to the Mayoralty chair at a time when he was acting as deputy Coroner for Walter Waldeshuf, the King's Butler,<sup>7</sup> and who continued to act as Coroner both during his Mayoralty and afterwards.<sup>8</sup> The Mayor had no official connection with the Coronership of the City any more than had the City Chamberlain. The allegations of some writers to the contrary are due to an error which originated with John Carpenter, "Common Clerk" (or "Town Clerk" of the City, as he would have been designated at the present day), from 1417 to 1438, and compiler of the City's Liber Albus.<sup>1</sup> The error has unfortunately been perpetuated down to modern times.<sup>2</sup>

In the case of one being killed in the City, we read in the City's Liber Horn that it was the duty of the Sheriff to go and enquire by the venue (per visnetum) who killed him, and to attach the culprit until the Justices should decide if prosecution should follow.<sup>3</sup>

So again, when the Justices were holding an Iter at the Tower in 1244, the question was asked what was the penalty if Sheriffs failed to attach a felon to appear before them, seeing that "heretofore the Sheriffs had made attachments and inquisitions on homicide and not the [King's] Chamberlain."<sup>4</sup>

In the Roll for the year 1300-1 here calendared, we have what appears to be the first recorded instance in the City's archives of a Coroner, or his Deputy, being associated eo nomine with the Sheriffs in holding Pleas of the Crown, in place of the King's Chamberlain.

The City's Justiciar.

King Henry I. by charter to the citizens of London circ. 1130-1135 had granted them permission to appoint a Justiciar of their own, to "keep" the pleas of the Crown and "plead" the same. This officer was believed by the late Dr. Charles Gross of Harvard—no mean authority—to have been identical with the office of Coroner.<sup>5</sup> However that may be, the citizens do not appear to have gained much by this charter, inasmuch as three centuries and more elapsed before they got the appointment of City Coroner into their own hands, and then only on payment of a large sum to the Crown.<sup>1</sup>

In the last year of the reign of Edward III. and again in the first year of the reign of his successor, the commonalty of the City complained to the King that great mischief was occasioned by reason of the Coroner not being subject to the civic authorities (n'est pas justisable par Maire, Aldermans ne par autres Ministres d'icels); and prayed that they might elect a Coroner of themselves, and remove him at will, as other cities were wont to do. To this the King replied that he would not depart from his ancient right.<sup>2</sup>

After the lapse of little more than 20 years, viz. : in 1399, the citizens had again occasion to make a complaint to the King in Parliament; this time, because Assizes which ought to be taken before the Sheriffs and the King's Coroner or his Deputy, could not be taken, on account of the Coroner or his Deputy being frequently absent. They prayed therefore that the Sheriffs might be allowed to proceed with the Assizes without the presence of Coroner or Deputy. On this occasion the citizens succeeded in obtaining a favourable reply, to the effect that the Sheriffs might proceed, after making a formal proclamation in writing for the Coroner or Deputy to attend.<sup>3</sup>

The King's Justices in Eyre.

In the meantime, the King's Justices had held Assizes at the Tower, but at long and uncertain intervals. We learn from the City's Liber de Antiquis—the earliest manuscript volume preserved at the Guildhall—that Pleas of the Crown were heard at the Tower in 1226, when John Herlisun failed to justify himself for the death of a man, but was granted the royal pardon at the instance of the women of the City.<sup>4</sup> Between 1226 and 1244 (when the next Iter was held) no pleas of the City were pleaded at the Tower,<sup>1</sup> and no other Iter was held until 1275.<sup>2</sup>

Strong opposition was always raised by the citizens whenever the Justices attempted to hold their Assizes at the Guildhall, or within the liberties of the City.<sup>3</sup> Hence the custom of the Justices holding their Iter at the Tower, as they appear to be depicted in the frontispiece.

As already mentioned, at every Iter, the Coroners, Sheriffs and Justices for gaol-delivery were called upon to produce their Rolls for the period that had elapsed since the last Assize.<sup>4</sup>

This was not always an easy task, owing to the long interval that had elapsed, and the decease of officers that had occurred. Nevertheless, the Justices of the Iter of 1321 insisted on their production and went so far as to fine William de Leyre for failing to put in his rolls of accounts, &c., for the Shrievalty he had served some thirty years before.<sup>5</sup> He was among the first to feel the heavy hands of the Justices at this memorable Iter: but he was not, by any means, the last. Here, too, we may possibly find another explanation of the small number of Sheriffs' and Coroners' Rolls preserved among the City's archives. Did the Justices in Eyre always return the Rolls, presented to them, to the Officers who produced the Rolls?

Deputy Coroners.

The City Coroner, being the King's Chamberlain and Butler, was so much occupied with the King's business that it became necessary to appoint a deputy, and numerous are the King's writs addressed to the civic authorities to admit to office such deputies.<sup>6</sup> These writs had always been readily complied with until the year 1435, when (for some reason that is not clear) the

<sup>6</sup> At the present day, every Coroner, whether for a county or borough, is bound by Statute to appoint a Deputy.—Stat. 55 and 56 Vict. Cap. 56 [A.D. 1892].

Mayor and Sheriffs refused to admit John Forthey as Deputy Coroner.

The reasons they gave for such refusal are, to say the least, remarkable.<sup>1</sup>

In the first place, they declared that prior to the year 1275 when the Statute (3 Edw. I., cap. x.) specifying the class of man to be elected as Coroner in the counties was enacted, the citizens of London had elected their own Coroner, by authority of the King and Parliament, and that the duties had always been executed in the name of the Chamberlain of London! A greater perversion of facts can hardly be conceived.

Secondly, they said that by virtue of the above Statute the election of a Coroner was lawfully made in the City or County of London, and appertained to the Mayor and citizens of the same. If that were true, it is strange that not a single instance of such an election having taken place is to be found recorded in the City's archives, and stranger still that the citizens should have been content in 1478 to release King Edward IV. of a debt of £7,000 for the privilege of electing their own Coroner (as already mentioned) so soon as the office, then vested in Antony Woodville, Earl Rivers, the Queen's brother and the King's Chief Butler, should fall vacant!<sup>2</sup>

Jurisdiction.

The jurisdiction of the City Coroner at one time extended eastward as far as Tower Hill, and even over a part of the Tower itself, notwithstanding the presence of the King himself within its walls;<sup>3</sup> but at the present day his jurisdiction does not extend beyond the Tower walls, the Coronership within the walls being a "franchise coronership."<sup>4</sup> On the other hand, the City's authority now embraces the Borough of Southwark by virtue of the Charter of <sup>1</sup> See 'Cal. Letter-Book K,' pp. 186-7.—An attempt has been made to explain the cause of the City's attitude on this occasion in the Introduction to the Calendar (pp. xlv, xlv), but it is no more than a surmise.

1550, whereas, formerly, the Coroner and the Sheriffs are recorded as having been amerced by the Justices in Eyre for venturing to receive the abjuration of a felon who had taken sanctuary in the Borough.<sup>1</sup>

Form of Inquest.

The inquests are recorded after a common form thus:—On a certain day information is given to the Coroner and Sheriffs that an individual was lying dead of a death other than his (or her) rightful death (ex alia morte quam recta morte sua) in a certain place, the parish and Ward being specified: that, thereupon, they proceeded thither, and having summoned a jury they diligently enquired how it happened.

The jurors were drawn, as a rule, from the Ward where the corpse was found, and from three, or more, of the Wards adjacent. Occasionally, a point was made of the Wards wherein the deceased was residing at the time, and where he received his fatal injury, being represented on the jury.<sup>2</sup> The names of the jurors are not recorded in the first four Rolls here calendared, but they are recorded in the later Rolls. Their number varies considerably; ranging from 12 from a single Ward, to 50 from four or five Wards. An average jury comprised about 30 individuals, whereas at the present day the number varies from 12 to 23.

Then follows the report of the jury's investigation as to the cause of death, whether it proved to be the result of a felony or misadventure. If the former, the jurors are questioned by the Coroner and Sheriffs as to what became of the felon, what goods and chattels he may have had, who first discovered the body, and who witnessed the felony. The felon's goods are forthwith appraised and committed to the custody of one of the Sheriffs, to be accounted for by him at the next Assize, when, if convicted, the goods became, by charter,<sup>3</sup> forfeited to the City.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>4</sup> In the counties, the felon's goods became, under similar circumstances, forfeited to the Crown, down to 1870, when such forfeiture was abolished by Stat. 33 and 34 Vict. cap. 23.

The corpse was invariably viewed by the Coroner and Sheriffs, in order to see if its appearance tallied with the report of the jury ; and, finally, precept was issued to the Sheriffs to arrest the fugitive felon as soon as he be found within their bailiwick, as well as to attach by sureties not only the discoverer of the body and those who witnessed the felony, but also four of the nearest neighbours, to appear before the Justices at the next Iter ; a Coroner's Inquest being then, as now, only a preliminary investigation, and not conclusive.<sup>1</sup>

At the present day, the jury view the corpse at the outset of the enquiry, before any evidence is taken by the Coroner, but as this appears to be done chiefly, if not solely, with the object of satisfying them that there is a dead body, the Committee of 1909 (already referred to) recommended that this procedure should be dispensed with as a rule. This recommendation, however, did not meet with the approval of Dr. Waldo, the City Coroner, and others, who objected that the "view" was of "great importance."<sup>2</sup>

It will be seen that in framing their report with the view of a subsequent indictment the jurors were careful to give full particulars of the cause of death, specifying the time and place when it occurred ; whether it was occasioned feloniously or not,<sup>3</sup> the nature of the weapon used, the exact dimensions of the wounds inflicted, the value of the weapon, &c.

Fire Inquests.

The inquests relate only to felony, homicide and misadventure, and have no concern with burglary, wreck, treasure trove, and other matters cognizable by Coroners at common law. Occasionally, we meet with inquests held on bodies of those whose death was caused by fire. Thus an inquest is recorded as

<sup>3</sup> Every indictment for a felony must still aver that the alleged act or acts was or were done feloniously, and if the word "feloniously" be omitted the indictment may be set aside as bad.—Halsbury, 'Laws of England,' Vol. IX, p. 341. In former days, too, it was essential that the actual instrument causing death should be designated, otherwise the prisoner got off ; but this is no longer the case.

having been held on the body of Alice, wife of John Ryvet, who was burnt to death by a fire occasioned by the fall of a lighted candle in the middle of the night as she and her husband were preparing to go to sleep. The record is a particularly gruesome one, inasmuch as, after effecting their escape from the burning building, the husband was so incensed with his wife for having caused the fire by her own negligence, as he maintained, that he pushed her back into the flames, and made off.<sup>1</sup>

Another instance of a fire caused by the fall of a lighted candle, which had been carelessly left on a wall, and resulting in the death of a mother and daughter who were sleeping on the premises, is recorded in 1337.<sup>2</sup>

As a matter of fact, it has always been the custom for Coroners to hold inquests in cases of fatal fires, although not specifically enjoined by the statute of 1276 on "The office of Coroner,"<sup>3</sup> but the custom of holding such inquests in cases of non-fatal fires is a comparatively recent innovation and is (practically) confined to the City of London.<sup>4</sup>

It is noteworthy that no case of arson or incendiarism is recorded in these Rolls.

Ecclesiastical Rights.

If the deceased was not killed on the spot, but lingered for some days, as was frequently the case, he is occasionally recorded as having received his ecclesiastical rights (ecclesiastica jura) that is to say, the rights of a dying man to have administered to him the rites of the Church i.e. the Sacraments.<sup>5</sup>

it was not necessary for the Coroner to view the body,<sup>1</sup> nor for the finder of the body to be attached.<sup>2</sup> The reason for this latter exemption is not quite clear, but it is said to be because the deceased lived long enough to exculpate the finder, if innocent, and to state who were the culprits.<sup>3</sup>

Deaths in Prison.

It was usual to hold inquests on those who died in prison, and at the present day it is the duty of the gaoler to notify the Coroner of such deaths before interment. In 1324 an inquest is recorded as having been held on the body of Henry, son of Thomas Staci (or Stace) of Ipswich, who had been committed to the Marshalsea for causing the death of John Christopher in a riot against the town Bailiffs. The record is of exceptional interest from the connection that existed between the Staci family and that of the poet Chaucer.

Another inquest of historical interest held on one who had died in prison is that recorded as having been held on Roger Mortimer of Chirk, who had been committed to the Tower, together with his nephew Roger Mortimer of Wigmore, in 1322. The nephew effected his escape, but the uncle remained a prisoner until he died his "rightful death" in 1326.<sup>4</sup>

Approvers.

Several instances are also recorded of inquests held on "approvers" who had died their "rightful" death in Newgate. These "approvers" were criminals who had saved their own necks by incriminating their partners in crime, by legal process known as an "appeal," and who had been thus rewarded for assisting in ridding the country of evil-doers. In 1325 a number of "approvers" confined in Newgate conspired together and broke prison. They took sanctuary, and were allowed to abjure the realm.<sup>5</sup>

If a felon were not immediately arrested three courses were open to him.

(1) He might take flight so as to get beyond the jurisdiction or bailiwick of the Sheriffs, to be arrested by them as soon as he returned. This was a comparatively easy matter to achieve in early days, for he had only to cross the river and seek refuge in the Borough of Southwark, where the Sheriffs could not touch him. After 1550, however, this retreat was closed to him, for by a charter, acquired in that year for the sum of 500 marks paid to the King, the civic authorities were empowered to arrest all felons found in the Borough and to carry them to Newgate to be there prosecuted according to law.

(2) He might take sanctuary in a church or other privileged place, where he was safe from the clutches of the law for at least 40 days. In that case the Coroner would come and parley with him, offering him the choice of surrendering himself to the King's peace or of abjuring the realm. More often than not, the refugee preferred to stay where he was, and to take his chance of escaping under cover of the night. This he frequently succeeded in doing, owing to the lax manner in which a refugee in sanctuary was guarded. Indeed, the civic authorities and the Sheriffs (to whom the duty of watching was usually committed) appear to have been of Dogberry's mind, that it were well to let such a one go and thank God that the City was rid of a knave.

Sanctuary.

In 1298 the Court of Aldermen had passed a resolution to the effect that in future no robber, homicide or other fugitive in the churches should be watched over (custodiantur).<sup>1</sup> At the Iter of 1321, however, the Mayor and Aldermen were interrogated by the Justices as to what had become of two fugitives, one of whom had taken refuge in St. Paul's and the other in the adjacent church of St. Gregory. After some days' consideration, the Mayor and Aldermen again appeared before the Justices and told them that the men in question had escaped from the churches; adding that neither the City nor the Sheriffs were to be held responsible for such escapes, and that robbers (latrones) in churches ought not to be watched. To this the Justices took exception as encouraging evil doers, and it was with some hesitation that they allowed the Mayor and Aldermen further time to re-consider their position. Meanwhile, they gave orders to their Serjeants to summon before them all neighbours and discoverers (of corpses) who had found sureties for appearance. Once more the Mayor and Aldermen demurred.<sup>1</sup> The matter was settled, for the time being, by the King granting a pardon under the Great Seal to the citizens for past neglect in watching felons, on the distinct understanding that in future they would take the same steps to watch felons and guard against their escape from churches as were taken in other parts of the realm.<sup>2</sup>

As soon as Edward the Third came to the throne he granted a charter to the City to the effect (inter alia) that the citizens should not be made responsible for the custody of those taking refuge in churches otherwise than of old accustomed, anything in the last Iter at the Tower of London made or adjudged, notwithstanding.<sup>3</sup>

It was one thing to set a watch over criminals in sanctuary to prevent their escape; it was quite another to drag criminals out of sanctuary. The latter constituted a grave offence against the Church, and when such an offence was committed in 1334 by order of Reginald de Conduit, the Mayor, the Archbishop of Canterbury hastened to London and cited the Mayor to appear before him in St. Paul's. Argument was useless, and the Mayor had humbly to submit to the head of the Church, who not only

<sup>2</sup> Letters patent dated 3rd June, 14 Edw. II. [A.D. 1321], and preserved at the Guildhall. Cf. 'Liber Cust.,' i. 346-7. It is significant that at an inquest held in the following November, when a felon took refuge in the church of the Augustine Friars, a precept was issued to the men of the Wards of Bishopsgate, Broad Street and Coleman Street [N.B. not the Sheriffs] to keep guard over him.—(Infra, Roll B, 5). Again, in 1325 the men of Bassishaw Ward were ordered to keep watch over a felon who had taken refuge in the church of St. Mary Aldermanbury (Roll D, 19).

insisted on his publicly restoring the prisoner to the sanctuary of the church from which he had been forcibly taken, but imposed on him and his officers a penance (pœnitentiam) adequate to so dire an offence.<sup>1</sup>

The existence in their midst of such a sanctuary for bad characters as that afforded by the church and precinct of St. Martin le Grand was a constant source of trouble to the citizens. Nevertheless, the civic authorities were compelled, much against their will, to respect its privileges. The Sheriffs were not allowed to arrest notorious offenders who had taken refuge there,<sup>2</sup> and, presumably, the City Coroner could not hold any inquest within the precinct. At least, no record of such an inquest appears to have come down to us.

(3) It might be that the refugee preferred the rôle of the "true patriot" and was prepared to leave his country "for his country's good."<sup>4</sup> In that case a port was either assigned to him by the Coroner,<sup>5</sup> or left to his own choice, whither he was to proceed within a limited number of days, each day's journey and halting place being specified, and thence to set sail across the sea at the first tide. His lands and goods were forfeited, and if he returned contrary to his oath, he could be treated as an outlaw.

We left our country for our country's good."

—Prologue to Young's tragedy "The Revenge" when played by convicts at Sydney in 1796. See N. & Q., 12th Feb., 1887.

<sup>5</sup> At the Iter of 1244 the Justices asked whether the Constable of the Tower, together with the Sheriffs and Aldermen, could receive such an abjuration without the (King's) Chamberlain (i.e. the Coroner) being present, and the Mayor and citizens replied that they could do so if the Chamberlain was absent on the King's business.—'Liber Albus,' i. 96-7; Roll AA, membr. 2 dors.; 'Liber Ordinationum,' fo. 209 b.

The procedure to be followed by an abjuring felon who had taken sanctuary, is thus set out in "The Mirror of Justices"<sup>1</sup>—a legal treatise of the 13th century, ascribed, as already mentioned, to Andrew Horn.

"If he acknowledges mortal sin, and prays to go forth from the Kingdom without the protection of the Church, let him come to the limit of the Sanctuary barefooted, ungirt, in his coat or shirt only, and swear that he will keep the direct road to such port or such passage as he shall have chosen, and that he will not remain in any place two nights together, until that for such mortal sin as he shall have acknowledged in the hearing of the people he has left the realm, and further, that he will not return in the king's life-time without his leave so help him God and the holy Gospels. And then let him take a cross and bear it so long as he shall be in the protection of the Church (e la porte taunt cum il est en la proteccion de leglise).<sup>2</sup>

The ports usually chosen or assigned were Dover or Southampton; Harwich and Bristol being exceptional.

The road to be taken to reach Dover—when four days were allowed—lay through "Depeford," or "Derteford" (Dartford), Newington, and Canterbury; or Singlewell, Newington, and Canterbury; or again, through Dartford, Rochester, and Ospring. If only three days were allowed, the prescribed route was to Rochester on the first day, and thence to Canterbury; or to Singlewell on the first day, and thence to Ospring, reaching Dover on the third day.

If the port of embarkation was Southampton, the felon was allowed to stop at Kingston, Guildford, and Alton; or at Cobham, Farnham, and Alresford (or Winchester), reaching the port on the fourth day.

Deaths by Felony.

The Rolls reveal in a forcible manner the seamy side of City life in the 14th century. One cannot help remarking how quickly, in those days, a word was followed by a blow from some lethal weapon. It was common for two men to be apparently on friendly terms, when suddenly a quarrel would break out and one would deal the other a blow with a sword or a knife which sooner or later caused his death; or again, a man casually meets another in the street to whom he owes a grudge, and the same thing happens. Not unfrequently we find the origin of a dispute to have been that causa teterrima belli—a woman.

A notable instance of the last mentioned class, resulting in the death of a chaplain,<sup>1</sup> is recorded in 1301. A married woman, being more or less the worse for drink, abused some workmen engaged on building a house, calling them "tredekeiles."<sup>2</sup> Thereupon one of the men seized her and bumped her on the ground telling her that she too should tread the ground with them (quod cum eis operaret et terram calcaret). On rising, she went to the house of Elena Hellebole, her mistress, and complained of the men; the mistress ran out and roundly abused the men, who were not slow to reply, but her abuse was of such a kind as to call for remonstrance from a passer-by, causing another interchange of strong epithets. The parties then separated, the woman threatening to be even with the man before night. In order to avenge herself she sent for a certain chaplain, named Walter de Elmebye, and one or two others, and persuaded them to go to a tavern kept by Agnes de Notingham where the stranger was housed. This they did, having previously armed themselves each with a fagot-stick, and there meeting a certain John de Melkesham, the chaplain asked him if it were he who had been abusing his (the chaplain's) mistress<sup>3</sup> and forthwith hit him on the head and arm. After a brief scuffle, the chaplain received such a blow from a dagger that he died on the spot. A sordid affair indeed.

Another sordid story is that of an attack made by a woman known as Agnes "Houdydoudy" on another woman who was enceinte, resulting in an abortive birth and the death of the mother.<sup>4</sup>

But perhaps the most sordid of all is the murder of a girl by a man and his wife, in whose house she occasionally passed the night, simply and solely for the clothes she was wearing.<sup>1</sup>

We read of affrays in which apprentices of law were engaged,<sup>2</sup> and of quarrels between members of different crafts. Thus in 1325 a Saddler was waylaid and killed by certain Goldsmiths, on account of an outstanding dispute between members of the two Guilds.<sup>3</sup> Again, in 1340 a riot broke out between certain Fishmongers and Skinners, in which Ralph Turk met his death, and the Mayor himself was assaulted whilst endeavouring to quell the disturbance.<sup>4</sup> This was one of the few cases where more than one inquest was necessary.

Weapons of offence.

The weapons called into play were of various kinds comprising a long and broad knife known as bidau, bidawe, or bideu; a trenchour or carving knife; a double-edged knife known as panade (poniard); an Irish knife (cultellus Ybarniacus); and a knife variously spelt thwytel, twitel and twytol, corrupted in later times into whittle.<sup>5</sup> Other knives or daggers mentioned are the anelace, or anlaz, the bazelard and misericorde. Of wooden instruments we find balstaff, or balghstaff, otherwise known as balkstaff; a cudgel or quarter staff, a distaff, a fagot staff, a piked staff, a dorbar and a wombedstaff, a variety of the bedstaff commonly used to keep bed clothes in their proper place, but frequently converted into a handy weapon in tavern brawls; a crutch or staff called potent, a billet of wood known as a shide or talwyschide, and a crooked billet or courbe. Several kinds of axe are mentioned, comprising a pollax, an axe called belte, a twybill or double-edged axe or halberd (known also as a sparthe) and a gysarme.

One cannot help remarking how many deaths occasioned by such weapons, or resulting from accidents, might have been avoided had proper surgical skill been at hand.<sup>1</sup> Such assistance, however, was not to be had in those days, the practice of surgery, such as it was, being in the hands of barber-surgeons, whose skill was limited, almost entirely, to letting of blood by cupping.

Accidents.

Next, in point of numbers, to murders and homicides on which inquests were held, come infortunia or deaths from mishap. Many of these were occasioned by falling down stairs (sometimes under circumstances which point to the stairs being outside the house<sup>2</sup>), or by falling off ladders or out of windows. Others met their death by falling accidentally into the Thames, or by being carried away and drowned whilst bathing. A curious instance of the first kind was recorded as having occurred in 1301, when a schoolboy crossing London Bridge on his way to school, one afternoon, after dinner, being attracted by the sight of a plank projecting over the side of the bridge must needs suspend himself from it, hanging on by his hands. His strength failed him and he was precipitated into the water and drowned.<sup>3</sup>

In October, 1321, two men were drowned within a few days of each other in Tower ditch, the draw-bridge being up.<sup>4</sup> The name of Houndsditch does not commend itself to our minds as a very suitable locality for a bath; nevertheless we find that a man was drowned whilst taking a bath there in 1337.<sup>5</sup> Another man was <sup>1</sup> We have a case recorded in 1301 of a man having broken his leg whilst wrestling, and of the finding of the jury that he died of the fracture and bad attendance (ex fractione predicta et male custodia). On the other hand, a case is recorded in 1324 of a wounded man being rescued by friends and taken to a house for medical treatment (ad medicinandum).—Roll D, 3. In the following year a wounded man was brought from Hoddesdon, co. Herts, to London for treatment.—Roll D, 25.

These, however, are exceptional cases.

drowned whilst trying to make his way by water from Paul's Wharf up to Fleet Bridge. He and four companions had committed a highway robbery upon two Florentine Merchants in the course of the day between Romford and Brentwood and had eased them of a number of florins and other goods. By a piece of good luck the foreigners afterwards caught sight of one of the thieves in the City and gave chase. The thief plunged into the river at Paul's Wharf, intending to make his way under cover of the wharves to Blackfriars and thence to Fleet Bridge, but the tide rising, he was drowned.<sup>1</sup> Drink in many cases was the cause both of felonies and accidents. We find instances recorded of deaths caused by falling timber, by the kick of a horse,<sup>2</sup> by being crushed by carts in the narrow streets, by scalding water, and from fires occasioned by the fall of lighted candles, as already noted. Two men were shot by arrows, one at Stepney whilst keeping watch over the crops of the Dean of St. Pauls',<sup>3</sup> and the other at Tyburn.<sup>4</sup> We read more than once of deaths being caused by accidentally falling down a well, or by suffocation of those who had deliberately descended wells for cleansing purposes. Some deaths were of particularly horrible characters, as was the case of a man who fell into a latrine owing to the breaking of a plank, and that of a helpless infant whose head had been mauled by one of the many swine which in those days infested the City,<sup>5</sup> notwithstanding frequent endeavours on the part of the civic authorities to put down the nuisance. Only once do we meet with a fatality on a large scale. This occurred in 1322, when more than fifty men and women of the poorest class were crushed to death at the gate of the Blackfriars whilst waiting for a distribution of alms under the will of Henry de Fingrie, a charitable fishmonger.<sup>6</sup> attacked an infant in its cradle and bit off its ears. Thereupon the King issued letters patent certifying to that effect lest, afterwards, it might be thought that the ears had been lost in the pillory or other disreputable manner.

In cases of death by misadventure, the thing causing the death became forfeited to the King by way of deodand or gift to God, the forfeit having been originally bestowed on the Church for the good of the deceased's soul. The English name of deodand was "bane," i.e. the slayer, from the Anglo-Saxon bana (Lat. banum). A distinction appears to have been drawn between cases where the thing or chattel causing death was in motion and where it was not. If in motion, everything connected with it and contributing to the death became deodand; if not in motion only that portion which was the immediate cause of death was forfeited.<sup>1</sup> For this reason, when an inquest was held in A.D. 1300 on a man who was killed by a piece of timber falling on his head, the Coroner and Sheriffs were careful to ask the jury whether any one had touched or moved the piece, when they replied that, although a man was shearing cloth in the room where the accident had occurred, he had done nothing with his hand (nichil manufecit)—in other words, had not touched the beam.<sup>2</sup>

So again, at an inquest held in 1336 upon a man who, being the worse for drink, was killed by a fall whilst scaling a ship's mast by means of a rope, the jury found that death was due solely to drunkenness and the rope, and that neither the ship nor anything belonging to it, except the rope, was moving at the time. Only the rope therefore was adjudged to be deodand at a value of 10s.<sup>3</sup>

Another instance is recorded of a death being occasioned by a cart in motion with three horses attached, when not only the cart but the three horses, and even the contents of the cart were declared forfeited.<sup>4</sup>

No deodand was due for accidents on the high seas, although <sup>1</sup> Omnia que movent ad mortem sunt deodanda. 'Jacob's Law Dict.' citing Bracton, who apparently disapproved of condemning as deodand a thing that had not moved.

<sup>2</sup> Infra, Roll A, 4. It is to be noted, however, that in this case the beam was appraised at a penny, by way of deodand, as it was certainly in motion.

a vessel might be forfeited for an accident in fresh water—a distinction difficult to understand.<sup>1</sup> Thus a boat out of which a man had been thrown in a storm and drowned in the Thames, near Botolph Wharf, was appraised at 20s. for a deodand, although the boat itself had been removed out of the City's jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup>

On the other hand, where a man had been pitched into the river from a wharf, owing to insecure footing, whilst endeavouring to unmoor a boat, the jury found that death was caused by his insecure footing, and that the boat was not moving and therefore not deodand.<sup>3</sup>

The thing itself causing death was not forfeited as deodand, but only its value as appraised by a jury at the inquest, and juries were apt to mitigate these forfeitures by putting their value at a low figure. It is to be noted that whereas the goods and chattels of a felon were generally delivered to the Sheriffs to account for them in due course, deodands, or their value, had frequently to be accounted for by the inhabitants of the Ward where the accident happened. It is further to be noted that the claim of the civic authorities to appropriate deodands in the City was not supported by any charter such as was the case with deodands within the Borough of Southwark.<sup>4</sup>

Whatever may have been the grounds on which the civic authorities based their claim, they appear to have continued to appropriate all deodands in the City at least as late as 1825, for in that year there are two cases recorded where the Corporation surrendered the value of a deodand (which had been received by the City Solicitor as one of the Bailiffs of the City) to the widow of the deceased. In the first case, the widow of a hair-dresser, who had been run over and killed by a Greenwich stage-coach, leaving his wife and family in poor circumstances, owing to the "general disuse of hair powder," petitioned the Common Council that the sum of £50 that had been levied as deodand on the coach and horses might be handed over to her<sup>5</sup>; in the second case the widow of a labourer, who had accidentally fallen on an open trap door in a floor, dragging with him a cask of oil which stood near and by which he had been crushed to death, prayed the Court that the sum of £10 at which the Coroner's jury had appraised the cask as deodand, might be given to her.<sup>1</sup> As already stated the Court acceded to both petitions.

By Stat. 3 and 4 Will. iv. cap. 99 [A.D. 1833] it was enacted that all deodands should be estreated into the Exchequer and any claim to them had to be submitted to the King's Remembrancer, who, if satisfied as to the justice of the claim, handed over the money.

It appears that the Corporation now began to entertain doubts as to the legality of their claim to deodands within the City and its liberties, and the question was referred to the City Solicitor. That officer reported to the Court of Aldermen on April, 1837, to the effect that Counsel (whom he had consulted) were of opinion that the City's charters were insufficient to vest the right of deodands in the Corporation, and that it would be inconvenient for the City to lay any claim to them.<sup>2</sup>

In course of time, the custom of deodands became so repugnant to humanity that in 1846 they were abolished by Lord Campbell's Act (Stat. 9 and 10 Vict. cap. 62), as "unreasonable and inconvenient."

CALENDAR OF CITY CORONERS ROLLS

ROLL A

1. On the death of William Wattepas.

On the Feast of St. Edward the King [13 Oct.] a° 28 Edward I. [A.D. 1300] information given to John the Clerk, Coroner locum tenens . . .<sup>1</sup> [and to Richard de Caumpes] and Luke de Haverynge, Sheriffs of London, that a certain William Wattepas lay dead [of a death other than] his rightful death in the rent (in redditu) of William Pikeman, in the Ward of Billingsgate, in the parish of St. Mary at Hill. Thereupon they proceeded thither and having summoned good men of that Ward . . . and Bridge they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that the said William Wattepas had for a long time lived in the county of Essex and had come to London to be cured of a wound in his arm; that he was taken ill and lived until Tuesday before the Feast of St. Edward, on the morning of which day he died, but not, say they, of his wound. Being asked by whom he had been wounded, they say they know not. The corpse was viewed and the wound was seen, and no other hurt.

On Friday the Feast of SS. Simon and Jude [28 Oct.] the same year [A.D. 1300] information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs, that a certain Henry Curteis lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in the house of Luke de Haverynge, in the parish of All Hallows at the Hay (ad fenum),<sup>2</sup> in the Ward of Douegate. Thereupon they proceeded thither and having summoned good men of the said Ward and of the three nearest Wards viz.: Bridge, Walebrok and Vintry they diligently enquired how it happened. They say on their oath that when on Thursday after the Feast of St. Luke [18 Oct.], after the hour of curfew the said Henry wishing to descend from the Hall of the said Luke, he fell to the ground from a step on to the right side of his head his feet failing him through intoxication; that he lingered until the following . . . when he died about midnight owing to the aforesaid fall. [Being asked who were present] they say No one, only he himself. And the corpse was viewed on which the right side of the head appeared broken. No other cause of death was suspected, but the accident only. The step was valued at 12 pence,<sup>3</sup> for which Richard de Caumpes will answer.<sup>4</sup>

On Monday the Eve of All Saints [1 Nov.] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1300], information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs that a certain Cristina Morel lay dead of a death other than her rightful death in the house of her said husband which he hired of Thomas Romeyn, in the Parish of St. Mary de Aldermarchirche, in the Ward of Cordwanerstrete.<sup>1</sup> Thereupon they proceeded thither and having summoned good men of the said Ward and of the three nearest Wards—viz.: Bredstrete, Vintry and Queenhithe—they diligently examined how it happened. They say on their oath, that when on the Friday preceding, in the dusk of the evening, a certain Reymund Bernard “Dorette” and a certain Peter de Artoys were together and passing the hostel of the said William the said Reymund entering the house found the said William in the solar and charged him with having feloniously sold a certain coat belonging to the said Reymund, so that there arose a dispute between them; that the said Reymund attacked the said William, and the said Cristina interposing, the said Reymund struck her with his foot under the navel so that she fell; that she lingered until the following Sunday, when she died, at the hour of Prime,<sup>2</sup> of the said kick. Being asked if the said Peter aided and abetted, they say No, but when the said Reymund entered the house Peter went home. Being asked who were present they say Nobody except Reymund. Being asked what became of Reymund after the felony, they say that he forthwith went to the hostel where he and the said Peter were staying, and as soon as he became aware of the death of the said Cristina, of which he was advised by a certain Magot his mistress, he immediately took flight and the said Magot likewise, but whither, they know not. The said Peter was attached and brought to the house of Luke de “Averyngge” the Sheriff. Being asked if they suspected any one else of the said death besides the said Reymund, they say No. The corpse was viewed, and the belly appeared blue and inflamed under the navel. Precept

6. On the death of Robert de Shordiche.

Portsoken

On Tuesday next after the Feast of St. Martin [11 Nov.] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1300], information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs, that a certain Robert de Shordiche lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in his house which he held of Edmund Trentemars without Aldgate, in the parish of St. Botolph, in the Ward of Portsoken. Thereupon they proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of the said Ward and of the three nearest Wards viz. : Billingsgate, Tower and Bishopsgate, they diligently enquired how it happened. They say on their oath that when on the preceding Sunday a certain William le Wallere came to the house of the said Robert and stole a tunic (collobium) belonging to him and pledged it with John de Ipswich, carpenter, for 7 pence, the said Robert discovering this, sought out the said William and found him whom he suspected, and assaulted him ordering him to restore his tunic : that the said William, being terrified, said that he had pledged the tunic for 7 pence offering to go with the said Robert to redeem it ; that they proceeded together to the house of the said John before the hour of curfew, and entering it the said William demanded the restoration of his tunic for the said 7 pence ; that thereupon the said John, moved to anger, struck the said Robert under the right breast with a dagger, inflicting a wound an inch in breadth and two inches deep ; that the said Robert lingered until Monday next after the Feast of St. Martin and then died, about the third hour of the wound aforesaid. Being asked who were present, they say only those three. Being asked whither went the said John after committing the felony, they say that he tarried in his house which he hired of the Prioress of St. Helen, and, as soon as he heard of Robert's death took flight, but whither they know not. Being asked whither went the said William le Wallere who stole the tunic, they say that he remained the whole of that night with the said John, and on the morrow was delivered to Luke de Haveryng, the Sheriff, together with the tunic. The corpse was viewed on which the wound appeared. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach the said John when found in their bailiwick. on the preceding Thursday, at the hour of Vespers, a certain Master John "de Elmenham" and Robert his brother were standing at the door of the church of St. Peter de Wodestrate near the new Cross in Chepe<sup>1</sup> the said Michael was sitting at a stall in the Goldsmithery (Aurifabria), and perceiving the said John and Robert, he got up and entered the stall of John le Disshere and sat there; and because of former rancour and abuse, a wordy strife arose between them so that the said Robert drew a certain Irish knife and struck the said Michael upon the left breast inflicting a wound an inch broad and penetrating through the body; that he lingered until midnight and then died of the wound. Being asked what became of the said Robert after committing the felony, they say that he immediately took refuge in the church of St. Mary Magdalen de Melkstrate with his knife drawn. Being asked if the aforesaid Master John had aided and abetted the felony, they say that, immediately after the felony, seeing his brother taking flight, he drew a certain knife called a "misericorde"<sup>2</sup> and ran after his brother as far as the church in order to rescue him; that he then entered his house which was near the church, and thence made his escape by a gutter to the church of All Hallows de Honilane, where he remained, and both refused to surrender. Being asked who were present, they say that a great number were passing by, but their names they knew not. The corpse was viewed on which appeared the wound but no other hurt. The chattels of the said Master John and Robert were valued at 65 shillings for which, Richard de Caunipes, the Sheriff, will answer. Vintry

On Sunday before the Feast of St. Nicholas [6 Dec.]
 29 Edward I. [A.D. 1300], information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs that a certain Hervey, servant of John "Wade," lay dead of a death other than his rightful death, in the house of the said John, in the parish of St. James de Garlek-huthe, in the Ward of Vintry. Thereupon, they proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of the said Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz.: Queenhithe, Cordewanestrete and Douegate, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when, on the preceding Saturday, after the hour of curfew, the said Hervey and a certain John Bradequoer, clerk of John Wade, were sitting in the Hall, a dispute arose about a certain forcer<sup>3</sup> that had been removed from the house of their master; that the said John charged the said Hervey with its removal, and the said Hervey called the said John a liar, whereupon the said John, being moved to anger, took a piece of wood called "talwshchide"<sup>4</sup> and therewith struck the said Hervey on the left side of the head, inflicting a wound 2½ inches in breadth and reaching the brain; that the said Hervey lingered until the morning and then died of the wound. Being asked who were present, they say No one except those two, but the aforesaid John Wade was in his chamber near his bed with his shoes off, and on hearing the noise came down into the hall, and when the said John Bradequoer heard him coming, he went out by the Hall-door and fled, but whither they know not.

17. On the Death of Joice de Cornwall.

On Monday after the Feast of St. Gregory [12 March] the year Walebrok aforesaid (A.D. 1300-1), information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs, that a certain Joice de Cornwall, "peleter,"<sup>1</sup> lay dead of a death other than his rightful death, in a street near the church of St. Mary de Bothhawe, in the Ward of Walebrok. Thereupon, they proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of the said Ward, and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Douegate, Candelwikstrate and Vintry, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that on the preceding Monday, at the hour of Vespers, the said Joice and a certain Thomas de Bristoll, skinner, were playing chequers on a bench (ultra perticam) in the house of Alice de Wautham, when there came Robert de Exeter, Roger de Lincoln, and Henry de Lincoln, bringing with them a certain woman over the chequers; that thereupon the said Thomas de Bristoll found fault with them so that angry words arising between them, the said Robert de Exeter seized the said Thomas by the shoulders and stript him of all his clothes down to his girdle; that finding, thereupon, that the said Thomas had a dagger, the said Robert seized and drew it. Seeing this, the said Thomas escaped to a room upstairs; that the said Robert then assaulted the said Joice who quitted the house, being followed by Robert as far as the corner of Paternosterlane, who then struck him with the said dagger, inflicting a wound on the left side of his chest under the breast, three inches deep, and one inch broad, with which wound the said Joice proceeded to the church of Bothawe, but fell in the street and immediately died of the aforesaid wound. Being asked if the said Roger and Henry were abettors of the felony, they say Yes. Being asked what became of the felons after the felony, they say they immediately fled, but whither, they know not. Being asked as to their goods and chattels the jurors say they have none. Being asked if any more were present at the time, they say None, except Leticia, the servant of Alice, who sold ale there. 18. On the death of Simon de Teye.

Queenhithe

On Easter Sunday [2 April] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1301], information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs that a certain Simon de "Teie" lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in the Court (in Curia) of John de Chigewelle, outside the gate of his Hall on the Western side in the Ward of Queenhithe, in the parish of St. Mary de Somersete. Thereupon they proceeded thither and having summoned good men of the said Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Vintry, Bredstrete and Castle Baynard, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on Easter Eve, as it was growing dark, the said Simon mounted a ladder to the top of the house to fetch a saddle that had been laid in a gutter to dry, on returning he placed his right arm per medium strigilli, so as to carry it, and the saddle fell from his neck and carried him down along with it so that they both fell upon the pavement from a height of 16 feet, from which fall the said Simon immediately died. Being asked who were present, they say that a certain Bartholomew Cook was in the kitchen. Being asked if they suspected any one else of the said death, they say No. The corpse viewed of which the whole of the left side of the head appeared crushed and the body bruised. The ladder valued at 2s. for which Luke de Haveryng, the Sheriff, will answer.

On Friday after the day called "Hokeday"<sup>1</sup> the year aforesaid Farndone [A.D. 1301], information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs that a certain Philip le Faitour lay dead of a death other than his rightful death at the top of the street (in summo vico) of Westchepe opposite the church of St. Mary le Quern, in the Ward of Nicholas de Farndone Within (infra), in the parish aforesaid. Thereupon they proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of the said Ward, and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : the Ward of William le Maserer,<sup>2</sup> Crepelgate, and Castle Baynard, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on the preceding Thursday, as it was growing dark, there came the said Philip, a certain Henry le Portour, Roger le Stronge and Peter Pecok through Westchepe, and the said Philip and Henry were quarrelling together, when they came opposite the said church, the aforesaid Henry le Faitour<sup>3</sup> drew an anelace and therewith struck the said Philip on the right side of the body, inflicting a wound an inch broad and four inches deep, reaching to the heart ; that he lingered untill midnight, when he died of the said wound. Being asked who were present, they say No one except those four. Being asked if the said Roger le Stronge and Peter Pecok were abettors of the felony, they say [No] but that they ran after the felon and were unable to catch him. What became of him, they know not. Being asked as to their goods and chattels the jurors say they had none. The corpse viewed on which the wound appeared, but no other hurt. Precept to the

Thereupon they proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of the said Ward, and of the three nearest Wards, viz.: Cornhull, Walebrok, and Bradestret, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when, on Thursday after the Feast of the Translation of St. Thomas the Martyr [7 July], the aforesaid year, the said William was in the house of Philip de Spine, after the hour of curfew, a quarrel having arisen between two dogs belonging to the said Philip, the said William savagely struck one of the dogs, and thereupon the said Philip, moved to anger, began to rate the said William; seeing which, a certain "Thouse,"<sup>1</sup> steward (dispensator) of the said Philip, took a staff called Balstaf, and therewith beat the said William on his arms and shoulders; that the said William lingered until Monday, the eve of the Feast of St. Peter ad Vincula, when he died of the beating at dawn. Being asked who were present, they say No one except those three. Being asked if the said Philip abetted the felony or not, they say Yes, and that he afterwards harboured the said "Touse." Being asked what became of the said Philip and Touse, they say that, perceiving that the said William was near unto death, they fled, but whither, the jurors know not. Being asked if they suspected any one else of the death, they say No. The corpse viewed, on which the right arm appeared swollen and inflamed, and the body, between the shoulders, blue. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach the said Philip and "Thouse" when found in their bailiwick. On Saturday before the Feast of St. Luke [18 Oct] a°, 15 Tower Ward
Edward II [A.D. 1321], information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs that a certain Elias de Beverle, servant of Hurtin Caillau the King's Serjeant-at-arms, and John Costard, Chamberlain to Sir Robert de Welles, Knt., lay dead of a death other than their rightful death in a certain waste place within the second gate of the Tower of London, towards the West,<sup>3</sup> in the parish of All Hallows de Berkynghirche in Tower Ward. Thereupon they proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of the said Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Portsokne, Billinggesgate and Alegate, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that on Thursday after the Feast of St. Michael [29 Sept.] the year aforesaid, at the hour of curfew when the said Elias de <sup>1</sup> He was in strictness sub-coroner to Stephen de Abyndone, who, in his capacity as the King's Butler, was Coroner of the City from 1316-1325. See 'Cal. Letter-Book E,' p. 165-6; Beaven's "Aldermen of London," p. 380.

<sup>2</sup> A transcript of a Coroner's Roll for the City a° 9 and 10 Edward II. preserved in the Chapter House, Westminster, will be found in Guildhall

MS. No. 126, in the Guildhall Library.

<sup>3</sup> This is important as showing the extent of the City's jurisdiction at the Tower. According to Coke ("Institutes," iii. 135) the old London Wall passed through the Tower, the part to the West of it being in the City; whilst the part to the East of it lay in the county of Middlesex. Beverle wished to visit the said Hurtin, his master, the bridge being drawn owing to the lord the King being then in the Tower, he accidentally fell into the water and was immediately drowned; and that on Thursday next before the Feast of St. Luke [18 Oct.] the same year, the said John Costard accidentally fell into the water there, in like manner, after the hour of curfew, and was drowned, and so the said Elias and John remained in the water until the Saturday aforesaid when a certain Robert le "Brybour" found their corpses after sun-rise and raised a cry so that the country came. Being asked who were present when this happened, they say No one except the said Elias and John, nor did they suspect any man or woman of the said deaths, but only mischance. ## 2. On the death of John de Harwe, "portour."

Vintry

On Tuesday after the Feast of St. Luke [18 Oct.] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1321], it happened that John de Harwe, "portour," lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in a certain solar which he hired of Robert de Pelham, "chaundeler," in the parish of St. Martin, in the Ward of Vintry. On hearing this the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriff went there, and having summoned good men of the said Ward and of four other Wards, viz. : Queenhithe, Cordewanerstrete, Douuegate and Billinggesgate, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when, on the preceding Monday, after the hour of Vespers, a certain Thomas atte Chirche, esquire to the Earl of Arundel, and a certain unknown man, whose name they know not, were riding together through "Tamsetrete" towards the Tower, and had come opposite the house of Olive Sorweles, a widow, in the parish of St. Botolph in the Ward of Billingesgate, the said Thomas atte Chirche nearly threw to the ground with his horse a certain unknown woman carrying a child in her arms, and because the said John de Harwe begged them to ride more carefully, the said Thomas, moved to anger forthwith drew his sword and struck the said John on his right side inflicting a mortal wound, two inches long and five inches deep, with which wound the said John went as far as the said solar, where he received his ecclesiastical rights (jura sua ecclesiastica) and lingered until the aforesaid Tuesday, when he died in the morning of the aforesaid wound and of no other felony. Being asked who were present when it happened they say the aforesaid Thomas and John, the man and the woman unknown and many passers-by whose names are unknown. Being asked what became of the said Thomas and the man unknown they say that they immediately fled toward the Tower, but where they went or who received them they know not, nor do they suspect any man or woman of the death except the said Thomas atte Chirche, who has no chattels except the horse on which he took flight.

The corpse viewed on which appeared the wound and no other hurt. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach the said Thomas and all other persons unknown who were present, as soon as they gained knowledge of them.

3. On the Death of Thomas le Rede.

On Friday next after the Feast of St. Luke [18 Oct.] the year Tower aforesaid, it happened that Thomas le Rede, servant (garçio) of Richard de Tonge, clerk of the chapel of the lord the King, lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in the tenement of Thomas Scot in the parish of St. Dunstan in Tower Ward. On hearing this, the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs went there, and having summoned good men of the said Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Alegate, Portsokne and Billinggesgate, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when, on the preceding Sunday, after the hour of curfew, the said Thomas le Rede and a certain Richard, a clerk, called Dicoun le Clerk, were quarrelling together opposite the house of John le Braye in the said parish, the said Richard drew forth his small knife and struck the said Thomas on the right side, inflicting a wound an inch long and four inches deep, with which wound the said Thomas went to the said tenement, where he lay dead. He there received his ecclesiastical rights and lingered until the Friday aforesaid, when he died at midnight of the wound aforesaid, and of no other felony committed against him. Being asked what became of the said Richard they say that he forthwith fled, but whither, or who received him, they know not. Being asked who were present when it happened, they say No one except those two, nor did they suspect any man or woman of the death except the said Richard, who had no chattels as far as they could ascertain. The corpse of the said Thomas was viewed, whereon the wound appeared, and no other hurt. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach the said Richard when found in their bailiwick.

4. On the death of Isabella, wife of Robert de Pampesworth.

Queenhithe

On Monday the Feast of St. Andrew Ap. [30 Nov.] the year aforesaid, it happened that a certain Isabella, wife of Robert de Pampesworth lay dead of a death other than her rightful death in a certain solar within the tenement held by Master Robert de Leycestre, clerk, under the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, in the parish of St. Mildred<sup>1</sup> in the Ward of Queenhithe. On hearing this, the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs went there, and having summoned good men of the said Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Vintry, Bredstret and Castle Baynard, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that the aforesaid Isabella for the two last years and more had suffered from a disease called "frensy," and that on the preceding Sunday, at the hour of Prime, she was alone in her chamber whilst Cristiana de Iseldone, servant to John de Pampesworth, son of the said Isabella, went to the kitchen to get her some food, and she hanged herself by a cord from a small beam in the said solar, when nobody was present, whilst suffering from the aforesaid disease ; that the said Cristiana when she entered the room and saw her hanging raised the cry, so that a certain William Scot ran thither and cut the cord with his knife, and the said Isabella fell to the ground alive, and so lingered for the space of a quarter of an hour of the same day and then died from weakness of the said disease and the hanging aforesaid. They suspect no one of the said death. The chattels of the said Isabella are appraised by William de Waltham, John le Chaundeler, Robert le Piebakere, Nicholas le Cordewaner, William de la Marche and John le Taillour of the Ward of Queenhithe, viz. : one blanket and a worn sheet at 6 pence, an old chest at 3 pence, and the aforesaid beam and cord at a farthing, which Richard Costantyn, the Sheriff, will answer for.

5. On the death of Michael le Gaugeour.Langebourne

On Monday the Feast of St. Andrew Ap. [30 Nov.] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1321], it happened that a certain Michael le Gaugeour lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in the lane called "Abbechirchelane," opposite the brewhouse then held by John de Douuegate of William de Canefeld, in the parish of St. Mary Wolnoth in the Ward of Langebourne. On hearing this, the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Walbroke, Candelwykestrete and Cornhulle, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on the preceding Sunday after curfew, the said Michael and a certain John Faukes, "corour," were playing at a game called "hasard," in the said brewhouse, a quarrel arose between them, so that the said John Faukes left the brewhouse, laying in wait for the said Michael, whom he shortly afterwards saw leaving the same brewhouse by himself, and drew his sword called a "fauchon" and of malice prepense, feloniously struck the said Michael with it on the left side of his breast, inflicting a mortal wound an inch long and  $5\frac{1}{2}$  inches deep; whereupon the said Michael fell to the ground and immediately died of the said wound and not of any other felony. Being asked who was present when it happened, they say No one except those two and a certain Agnes la Pursere, wife of the said Michael, who came up and first found the said Michael dead, and raised the cry so that the country came. Being asked what became of the said John, they say that he immediately fled into the church of the Augustine Friars and confessed before the said Coroner and Sheriffs that he had committed the said felony, and therefor refused to surrender himself to the King's peace. Precept issued to men of the Wards of Bisshopesgate, Bradestret and Colemanstrete to keep watch over him until, &c.,<sup>1</sup> and he re-

<sup>1</sup> In 1298 the Court of Aldermen had passed an ordinance that those taking sanctuary should not be watched.—'Cal. Letter-Book B,' p. 215. At the Iter recently held at the Tower, the civic authorities had maintained that by the ancient customs of the City they were not bound to place a guard upon those taking sanctuary in churches nor were responsible for their escape. The King thereupon had issued letters mained in the said church until Thursday next before the Feast of the Conception of the B. Mary [8 Dec.], on which day he escaped in the early morning (in aurora), but whither he went or who afterwards received him they know not. Being asked of the goods and chattels of the said John, they say that he had none so far as they could learn. The corpse of the said Michael was viewed, on which the said wound appeared and no other hurt. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach the said John as soon as he was found in their bailiwick.

6. On the death of John de Canterbury.

On the same day it happened that a certain John de Canterbury, Portsoken "sadeler," lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in a certain "solar," tenanted by Agnes de Cranesle in the rent (in redditu) of Richer de Refham, Knt., in the parish of St. Botolph in the Ward of Portsoken. On hearing this, the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of the said Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Tower, Lymstret and Alegate, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when Sunday preceding the Feast of St. Martin in yeme [11 Nov.], after the hour of curfew, a certain William Counte called "Frelove," and Ralph Sutor, boatmen met the said John de Canterbury in the street called "Hoggestrete"<sup>1</sup> in patent (3 June, 1321) pardoning the citizens for past negligences in this respect on the distinct understanding that in future they should set a watch in conformity with the law and custom of the realm. — Cal. Letter-

Estsmethefeld in the said Ward, they, of malice prepense, assaulted the said John and with their sticks, called oars, mortally beat him about the legs and back and the said William Counte beat the said John over the forehead with his stick inflicting a mortal wound two inches long and penetrating to the brain; that the said John so wounded was carried by his friends into the solar aforesaid, and there received his ecclesiastical rights; that he lingered until the Sunday before the Feast of St. Andrew [30 Nov.] when he died about sunrise of the wound and beating aforesaid, and of no other felony. Being asked who were present when it happened, they say No one but those three, nor do they suspect any one of the death except the aforesaid William and Ralph. Being asked what became of the said William and Ralph, the jurors say that they immediately fled to the house of the said Ralph which he held of William de Bosenham in the parish aforesaid where they were captured by Richard de Hakeneye one of the Sheriffs. They had no chattels. Afterwards before Henry Spigournel and his fellow Justices at Newgate they put themselves<sup>1</sup> (po. se) and were acquitted on Monday after the Feast of Circumcision [1 Jan.].

7. On the death of Walter Edward.

Newgate

Friday after the Feast of the Conception of the B. Mary [8 Dec.] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1321], a certain Walter Edward died in the prison of Newgate his rightful death, having been committed to the said prison by the Steward and Marshal of the lord the King for 30s adjudged to John Salve of Hese in a plea of trespass. The corpse was viewed on which no hurt appeared.

8. On the death of Elena Scot.

Tuesday after the Feast of St. Thomas Ap. [31 Dec.] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1321], it happened that a certain Elena Scot, servant of Margaret de Sandwich, lay dead of a death other than her rightful death in a certain house held by the said Margaret of Henry de St. Osith in the parish of St. Benedict de Wodewharf in the Ward of Castle Baynard. On hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither and having summoned good men of the said Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Farndone, Bredstrete and Queenhithe, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on the Sunday preceding, at dusk, the said Elena left the solar of the said house to seek fire, she slipped from the top step of the entrance of the solar and fell backwards down the steps upon a stone at the bottom and broke her neck and forthwith died in consequence and from no other felony. Being asked who were present when this happened they say the aforesaid Margaret and one Cristina Lovel, and the said Margaret first discovered the corpse and raised the cry, so that the country came ; nor do they suspect any man or woman of the said but only the mischance aforesaid. The corpse was viewed, on which the broken neck appeared and no other hurt.

9. On the death of Robert Denys.

Wednesday after the Feast of St. Thomas Ap. [21 Dec.] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1321], it happened that a certain Robert Denys,

Castle Baynard

Cordewan-strete

goldsmith, lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in the house of Dionisius de Grauntebrigge, his father, in the parish of All Hallows de Bredstrete in the Ward of Cordewanerstrete. On hearing this the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of the said Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Cheap, Bredstrete and Vintry, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on Saturday before the Feast of St. Nicholas [6 Dec.] at dusk, the aforesaid Robert and a certain John de Pastone had come to the corner of the church of St. Mary le Bow in the lane of Cordewanerstrete, quarrelling together, the said John de Pastone at length drew his sword and feloniously cut off the left hand of the said Robert who, thus wounded, went to the house aforesaid where he lay dead ; having received his ecclesiastical rights he lingered until Monday in the said Feast of St. Thomas and then died about the third hour, from the loss of his hand and no other felony. Being asked who were present when this happened, they say those two and a certain John, son of John de Fyncham and no one else. Being asked if the said John abetted the felony or not, they say No ; nor do they suspect any man or woman of the said death but only the said John de Pastone. Being asked what became of the said John they say he entered the house of Matthew de Essex, his master, in the said lane, the said Matthew knowing nothing of the felony, and there the said John was arrested and committed to Neugate. He had no chattels, so far as they could learn. The corpse was viewed, the loss of the hand was seen and no other hurt.

10. On the death of Philip de Asshendone.

Sunday after the feast of Circumcision [1 Jan.] the year afore- Bisshopesgate said [A.D. 1321-2], it happened that a certain Philip de Asshendone lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in the Hospital of St. Mary without Bisshop[esgate] in the Ward of Bisshop[esgate].
On hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither and having summoned good men of that Ward and four other Wards, viz. : Bradstrate, Cornhull, Farndone Within and Chepe, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on Monday before the Feast of Conception of the B. Mary [8 Dec], at the hour of Vespers, a certain William, son of Henry atte Rowe, goldsmith, stood at the top of St. Vedast lane near Chepe, and made water into a certain urinal, he cast the urine into the shoe of an unknown young man, and because the latter complained, the said William struck him with his fist, so that a staff called "pollex" which was in the young man's hand fell to the pavement. On seeing this the aforesaid Philip upbraided the said William, who moved with anger straitway picked up the staff and feloniously struck the said William [sic] over the forehead, inflicting a mortal wound an inch long and penetrating to the brain so that he fell to the ground, and was thence carried by men unknown for charity's sake to the said Hospital where he had his ecclesiastical rights and there lingered until Saturday after the Feast of Circumcision when he died at the third hour of the said wound and of no other felony. Being asked who were present when this happened, they say the aforesaid William, Philip, the youth unknown, John de Waledene, "sadelers" and Thomas de la Welde, servant of Richard de Hakeneye, Sheriff of London, who took the aforesaid William and brought him to the prison of Neugate. They suspect no one else of the said death except the said William son of Henry atte Rowe who had no chattels. The corpse viewed, &c. Precept to the Sheriff to attach the youth unknown when found in his bailiwick and he can get knowledge of him (noticiam ab eo

Newgate

John le Dyere de Wottone died in Newgate prison on Monday after the Feast of St. Hillary the year aforesaid [A.D. 1321-2] of his rightful death. The corpse viewed, &c. The said John was sent to the prison by the Steward and Marshal of the King's Household.

12. On the death of John "Tygre."

Langbourne

Tuesday after the Feast of Epiphany [6 Jan.] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1321-2], it happened that John de "Tygre" lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in a certain solar in the tenement of Alice his wife in the parish of St. Clement de Candelwykstrete in the Ward of Langbourn. On hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither and having summoned good men of the said Ward and of five other Wards, viz. : Candelwykstrete, Cheap, Bredstrete, Crepelgate and Farndone Within, they diligently enquired how this happened. The jurors say that when on Sunday next after the Feast of the Circumcision [1 Jan.] the year aforesaid a certain John de Eddeworth, brother of the late Osbert le Pledour, was riding in company with certain men unknown who were taking Walter de Selby, an enemy and rebel to the lord the King, towards the Tower of London, he met the aforesaid John de Tygre, to whom he said that by reason of the death of the aforesaid Osbert his brother, whom the said John de Tygre had killed, he would have something to say to him when opportunity occurred ; that the two men moved to anger separated, and thence forward each lay in wait to kill the other. At length on Monday next after the Feast of the Circumcision, before midnight, the said John de Eddeworth, with two other men, his companions, whose names are unknown [met] the said John de Tygre at the head of Soperslane, in the Ward of Cheap, and immediately the said John and John with their swords drawn, and the two persons unknown, one with his knife, called " Irisknyf," and the other with a wooden staff called " Balstaf," fought together, so that the said John de Eddeworth and his two companions drove the said John de Tygre from place to place, and at the head of Wodestrete, opposite the tenement of John de Shordych in the Ward of Crepelgate, the said John de Tygre fell over a heap of dung, and forthwith the said John de Eddeworth and his companions mortally wounded him as he lay, viz.: the said John de Eddeworth with his sword inflicted five mortal wounds, three being on the back of the head, and one on the left side, each of them two inches long and penetrating the skull, and one under his left ear, an inch and a half deep and two inches long, whilst one of the unknown men with his staff mortally beat him on his sides, back, arms and neck ; that when certain watchmen for keeping the peace in the said Ward heard of this, they immediately ran thither and found the said John de Tygre thus wounded and beaten, and certain of his friends carried him to the said solar where he lay dead and there he had his ecclesiastical rights, and lingered until the Sunday before the said Feast of Epiphany when he died after the ninth hour from the said wounds and blows, and from no other felony. Being asked where the said John de Eddeworth and his companions went, they (the jurors) say that they immediately fled, but whither they went or who received them they know not. Nor had they any chattels so far as they could learn. Being asked who were present when it happened, they say No one except those four, nor did they suspect any man or woman of the death except the said John de Eddeworth and his companions. The corpse was viewed on which the said wounds and bruises appeared. Precept to the Sheriffs to arrest the said John de Eddeworth and his unknown companions as soon as they are found in their bailiwick, and knowledge of them be had (et noticiam eorumdem habeant).

14. On the death of Reginald de Freestone, Settere.<sup>1</sup>

Bradstreet

Tuesday next after the Purification B.V. Mary [2 Feb.] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1321-2], it happened that a certain Reginald de Freestone, "settere," lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in the street called Bradstrete, near the gate of the tenement held by Juliana de Bromford of Jordan de "Langeleye" in the parish of St. Peter de Bradstrete. On hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither and having summoned good men of Bradstrete Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz.: Bisshopesgate, Cornhulle and Colmanstrete, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that on the preceding Tuesday at midnight the said Reginald de Freestone, John "Bocche," Walter le Skynnere and eleven others whose names are unknown were passing the door of the shop tenanted by William de "Grymysby" under Roger, son of Robert Osekyn, in the parish of St. Benedict Fynk in the Ward of Bradstrete, singing and shouting, as they often did at night, [when] the said William de "Grymyby" who was in the shop, besought the said Reginald and his companions to allow him and his neighbours to sleep and rest in peace. Whereupon, the said Reginald de Freestone, John "Becche," Walter le Skynnere and the rest of their companions, unknown, invited the said William de "Grymisby" to come out of his shop if he dared. At length, the said William de "Grymesby" seizing a staff called "Balstaf," left his shop, and running after the said Reginald, Walter and his other companions smote the said Reginald with the staff on the left side of the head and smashed the whole of his head therewith, so that he fell to the ground at the entrance of the tenement of Jordan de "Langelegh" aforesaid and there lingered without speaking until break of day on the aforesaid Tuesday when he died of the blow and of no other felony. Being asked who were present when this happened the jurors say the said William, Reginald, John, Walter and their eleven companions, unknown, and no one else; and the said William de "Grymesby" forthwith fled, but whither he went and who harboured him they know not, nor do they suspect any one else of the death. Alice de Breynford first discovered the said Reginald, dead, and she raised the cry so that the country came. Being asked as to the goods and chattels of the said William, the jurors say that he has divers which should be appraised, and they are appraised by the oath of Thomas Brangueyn, Peter le Coffrer and William Mabily, viz. : two small pigs at 3s. ; one "shippingbord" at 3d. ; one broken chest and a table at 6d. ; one pair of worn linen sheets at 4d. ; a blanket and a worn linen cloth and other small things at 2s. 9½d.. Total 6s. 11½d., for which Richard de Hakeneye, the Sheriff, will answer. Precept to the Sheriff to attach the said William as soon as he be found in his bailiwick, and also the aforesaid John "Bocche," Walter le Skynnere and the eleven unknown persons who were present, as soon as he gets knowledge of them.

16. On the death of Richard de Mountsorel, cobbler.

Langebourne

Monday after the Feast of St. Gregory [12 March] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1321-2], it happened that a certain Richard de Mountsorel, servant of Roger de Notyngnam, cobbler, lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in the house of John atte Rye which the said Roger holds in the parish of All Hallows de Graschirche in the Ward of Langebourne. On hearing this, the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Bridge, Cornhulle and Bisshopesgate, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on the preceding Sunday, at dusk, the said Richard de Mountsorel and a certain Alexander le Ferrou, servant of Henry de Amondesham, were quarrelling together in the said house, the said Alexander, moved with anger, drew his knife, called a "fauchon," and mortally wounded the said Richard de Mountsorel under his left ear, (nobody except the said Richard and Alexander being present), inflicting a mortal wound an inch long and two inches deep, so that he immediately fell down and lingered until the hour of curfew of the same day, when he had his ecclesiastical rights and then died of the wound aforesaid and of no other felony. Being asked whither went the said Alexander, they say that he immediately fled, but whither he went or who received him, they know not, nor do they suspect any man or woman of the said death, but only the said Alexander. Being asked about his goods and chattels they say that he had none so far as they could learn. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach the said Alexander when found in their bailiwick.

18. On the death of Luke atte Hetthe.

Monday after the Feast of St. Mark [25 April] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1322], it happened that a certain Luke atte Hetthe, "avener,"<sup>2</sup> lay dead of a death other than his rightful death near "le Ledenhalle" in the parish of St. Peter de Cornhulle in the Ward of Lymstrete. On hearing this, the aforesaid Sheriffs and Coroner proceeded thither and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Cornhulle, Bisshopesgate and Alegate, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when, on the preceding Sunday, at the hour of Vespers, the aforesaid Luke and a certain John le Avener, clerk to the Earl of Chester <sup>1</sup> and William de Wircestre, the said John's groom (garçio), were sitting drinking in a solar of the tavern held by John de Oxenford of William de Wengrave in the said parish, a quarrel arose between them, so that the said John le Avener took in his hand a certain wooden measure called a "quart" and struck the said Luke therewith on the top of his head, inflicting a wound that was not mortal, two inches long and reaching to his skull. Thereupon, the said William de Wircestre feloniously threw the said Luke on to the stair of the said solar so that he mortally injured his neck and shoulders, and the said Luke, thus injured, was carried thence by his friends to the place where he died and where he had his ecclesiastical rights; that he lingered until mid-prime <sup>2</sup> on the Monday, at which hour he died of the said injury. Being asked who were present when it happened, they say No one except those three and a certain Roger Ote. Being asked if the said Roger abetted the felony, they say No; nor do they suspect any man or woman of the death of Luke save the said John and William who had no chattels so far as they could learn. Being asked what became of the said John and William the jurors say that the said John forthwith fled, but whither he went or who received him they know not; and the said William was captured and committed to Neugate prison. The corpse viewed on which the injuries appeared and no other hurt. The aforesaid measure was appraised by the said jurors at a half-penny, and the stair at two-pence, for which Richard de Hakeneye would answer. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach the said John le Avener when found in their bailiwick, and also the said Roger Ote because he was present.

20. On the death of Robert de Kent, cordwainer.

On Wednesday after the Feast of St. Mark [25 April] the year Cheap aforesaid [A.D. 1322], information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs, that a certain Robert de Kent, cordwainer, and William his son, lay burnt in a certain high solar held by the said Robert of Adam Braz in the parish of St. Martin de Ismongerlane in the Ward of Cheap. Hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Walbroke, Cordewanerstrete and Colemanstrete they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on the preceding Tuesday a little before midnight, the said Robert and Matilda his wife, and William and John their sons lay asleep in the said solar, a lighted candle fixed on the wall by the said Matilda fell by accident on the bed of the said Robert and Matilda, and set the whole house on fire ; that the said Robert and William were immediately caught in the flames and were burnt, and the said Matilda and John with difficulty escaped with their lives. Being asked who were present when it happened, they say No one except the aforesaid Robert, Matilda, William and John nor do they suspect anyone thereof, but the aforesaid mischance. The corpses viewed, of which the heads, legs, arms and other members appeared burnt and almost utterly destroyed. 22. On the death of John, son of John de Lincoln, cordwainer.

Cornhulle

On Sunday after the Feast of SS. Philip and James [1 May] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1322], it happened that a certain John, son of John de Lyncoln, cordwainer, lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in the house of Agnes de St. Neot in the parish of St. Michael in the Ward of Cornhulle. On hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of the same Ward and of three other Wards, viz. : Bisshopesgate, Bradestrete and Billynggesgate they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that on the preceding Friday at the hour of Prime when the said John was journeying towards Roucestre he associated with a certain groom, whose name is unknown, and that when they had come to the wick (vicum) called "le Blakehethe" in the county of Kent, the said groom, (nobody else being near), drew a knife called "Twytel" <sup>1</sup> be-

27. On the death of Robert Curteys.

Bredstrete

Tuesday before the Feast of Ascension [20 May] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1322], information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs that a certain Robert Curteys lay dead of a death other than his rightful death near the door of the house held by John atte Ryole of Richard de Wyrhale in the lane called "Distaflane," in the parish of St. Dunstan [sic] in the Ward of Bredstrete. On hearing this, the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz.: Queenhithe, Castle Baynard and Farndone Within, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on the preceding Monday about the time of sun-set the said Robert made an assault upon Amicia, wife of John Pope as she stood at the door of the shop which the said John and Amicia hold of John Madefrey in the aforesaid lane by reason of an old quarrel between them, and had badly beaten her with a staff called "Distaf," there came up the said John Pope holding in his hand a drawn knife called "Twytel" which he used in the service of William Prodhomme, fishmonger, and approached the said Robert Curteys to pacify his anger by fair means, if possible; and that when the said Robert saw him coming, he assaulted and beat him pursuing him as far as the wall of the house which Richard Heyne holds of John de Pelham in the said Ward of Bredstrete; that, at length, the said John Pope struck the said Robert with the knife under the left breast, inflicting a mortal wound an inch long and two inches deep; that the said Robert, so wounded, followed the said John in order to kill him, as far as the place where he lay dead, and there he fell and forthwith died of the wound aforesaid. Thereupon, the said John took refuge in the church of St. Margaret<sup>1</sup> in the said Ward. Being asked who were present when this happened, the jurors say the said Robert, John Pope, Amicia his wife and a certain Isabella de Bristoll who was the first to find the corpse of the said Robert and to raise the cry so that the country came. Being asked if the said Amicia or Isabella abetted the felony, they say No, nor do they suspect any man or woman of the felony save the said John Pope who, when the said Coroner and Sheriffs came to him, would confess nothing. He had no chattels except 6*d.* which Richard Costantyn the Sheriff will answer for. The corpse viewed whereon the said wound appeared and no other hurt. Precept to the Sheriffs to safeguard, &c. On Monday before the Feast of St. Margaret [20 July] a<sup>o</sup> 16 [Edward II, A.D. 1322], John, son of Richard atte Crouche called "atte Loke" of Canturbury, took refuge in the church of St. Mary atte Hull and confessed before the said Coroner and Sheriffs that he had feloniously killed a man, name unknown, at Wynchecombe Glouc. on Thursday in Christmas week last passed and therefor he refused to render himself to the peace of the lord the King and sought to abjure the realm of England, and he abjured it on the Monday following, and the port of Dover was assigned him for four days, viz. : the first to Depesford,<sup>1</sup> the second to Rouchestre, the third to Osperyng and the fourth to Dover to cross the sea at the first tide under penalty attaching thereto.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> A felon who had taken sanctuary, could enjoy the privilege of such sanctuary for forty days, in the course of which the Coroner interviewed him and he could make up his mind whether to submit to trial or abjure the realm. If he chose the latter course, he was obliged to clothe himself in sackcloth and make all speed to a port assigned to him thence to cross the sea at his earliest opportunity. His lands and goods were forfeited, and if he returned he could be treated as an outlaw. Bracton (ed. Travers Twiss), ii 395. Pollock and Maitland, 'Hist. of English Law,' ii. 588; Mazzinghi, "Sanctuaries," pp. 30, 31. Occasionally we find the felon choosing his own port of departure. Vide Infra Roll C, 16. Cf. proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Farndone, Crepulgate, and Cheap, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that on Thursday before the Feast of St. Margaret [20 July] at the hour of curfew the said John Pentyn would have hanged himself in the aforesaid solar, and on that account his wife Clemencia raised the cry so that the said John de Chiggewell, John atte Mersshe, Adam de Wykham, and other neighbours, names unknown, came to her assistance, and that when the said John de Chiggewell would have entered the solar before the others, the said John Pentyn feloniously struck him on the head over his left ear with an iron staff, inflicting a mortal wound three inches long and five inches deep, with which wound the said John fell down in the said solar and there had his ecclesiastical rights ; that he lingered until Thursday before the Feast of St. Peter [1 Aug.] and then died shortly after Noon of the wound aforesaid and of no other felony. Being asked what became of the said John Pentyn, they say that he was immediately captured and taken to Neugate, and they suspect no one else of the death except the said John Pentyn. The corpse viewed on which the wound appeared and no other hurt. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach the persons unknown as soon as they had knowledge of them, because they were present.

49. On the death of Lucy Faukes.

Alegate

On Monday before the Feast of St. Michael [29 Sept.] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1322], it happened that a certain Lucy Faukes lay dead of a death other than her rightful death in a certain shop which Richard le Sherman held of John Priour, senior, in the parish of St. Olave in the Ward of Alegate. On hearing this, the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz.: Portsokene, Tower, and Langebourne, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that on Sunday before the Feast of St. Matthew [21 Sept.] a<sup>o</sup> 16 [Edward II., A.D. 1322], about the hour of curfew, the aforesaid Lucy came to the said shop in order to pass the night there with the said Richard le Sherman and Cristina his wife, as she oftentimes was accustomed, and because the said Lucy was clad in good clothes, the said Richard and Cristina began to quarrel with her in order to obtain a reason for killing her for her clothes. At length the said Robert took up a staff called "Balstaf," and with the force and assistance of the said Cristina, struck her on the top of the head, and mortally broke and crushed the whole of her head, so that she forthwith died; that the said Richard and Cristina stripped the said Lucy of her aforesaid clothes, and immediately fled, but whither they went or who received them, they (the jurors) know not. Being asked who were present when this happened, they say No one except the said Richard, Cristina and Lucy, nor do they suspect anyone of the death except the said Richard and Cristina. Being asked of the goods and chattels of the said Richard and Cristina, the jurors say they had nothing except what they took away with them. Being asked who found the dead body of the aforesaid Lucy, they say a certain Giles le Portour who raised the cry so that the country came. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach the said Richard and Cristina when found in their bailiwick.

1. On the death of Gilbert de Getyngtone.

Bradestret

On Friday after the Feast of St. Michael [29 Sept.] a° 17 Edward II. [A.D. 1323], information given to the said Coroner and Sheriffs that a certain Gilbert de Getyngtone lay killed in a solar within the tenement of Ivo Perceval, in the parish of Little St. Bartholomew in the Ward of Bradestret. On hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Bisshopesgate, Cornhulle, and Walebroke, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on Monday before the Feast of St. Matthew [21 Sept.] last passed, after the hour of curfew, the said Gilbert had left the house of the said Ivo where he had been supping the same night and was going to his hostel in Soperslane, there met him opposite the church of Christopher in the said Ward of Bradestret a certain Roger de Modyngnam, fishmonger, and Reginald Laurenz, called "Heyne," and they quarrelled with one another, so that the said Reginald Laurenz attacked the said Gilbert with his knife called a "bideu"<sup>1</sup>; that the said Gilbert broke the knife with his staff called "fagotstaf"<sup>2</sup> whilst fighting, and then each threw the other to the ground; that the said Roger struck the said Gilbert when on the ground with a staff called "sparth"<sup>3</sup> on his right hand, inflicting a mortal wound four inches long, and penetrating the middle of the hand; that the said Gilbert so hurt went thence to the place where he lay dead and had his ecclesiastical rights; that he lingered until Wednesday before the Feast of St. Michael when he died at the hour of Prime of the wound aforesaid. Being asked who were present when this happened the jurors say Richard Perers, Laurence atte Gate and William his brother. Being asked if the said Richard, Laurence and William, or any of them, abetted the felony, they say No, nor do they suspect any one except the said Roger and Reginald, who immediately after the felony took flight, but whither they went or who received them, the jurors know not. Being asked as to the goods and chattels of the said Roger and Reginald, they say that the said Roger has none so far as they can learn, and that the said Reginald has a blanket, a long cloak (husceam), and two worn sheets of the value of 14 pence, a chest with half a bushel of beans worth 7 pence; total 21 pence, for which Adam de Salisbury, the Sheriff, will answer. The staff called "sparth" and the knife called "bideu" were valued by the jurors at 3 pence, for which the Ward of Bradestreet will answer. The corpse viewed on which the said wound appeared. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach the said Roger and Reginald when found in their bailiwick.

2. Abjuration of John son of William le Muleward of Schete.<sup>1</sup>

On Wednesday before the Feast of St. Edward [13 Oct.] a<sup>o</sup> 17 Edward II. [A.D. 1323], a certain John, son of William le Muleward, of Schete, co. Southampton, fled to the church of St. Agnes within Aldresgate in the same Ward, and there, on the same day, confessed before the said Coroner and Sheriffs and other trustworthy persons that on the preceding Sunday at dusk he robbed a man, name unknown, in a house near Andovere, co. Wilts, of cloth and other goods to the value of 5s. and refused to surrender to the King's peace therefor, and asked to abjure the realm of England, and did abjure it on the following Thursday. And the port of Dover was assigned to him to cross the sea in four days, viz. : the first to Depesford, the second to Roucestre, the third to Osprege, and the fourth to Dover, thence to cross the sea at the first tide under penalty attaching thereto &c. 4. On the death of John de Chartres.

On 'Thursday the eve of SS. Simon and Jude [28 Oct.] a<sup>o</sup> 17 Bredstret Edward II. [A.D. 1323], it happened that a certain John de Chartres de Monte Leheri <sup>1</sup> lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in the kitchen of the hostel of Master Pandulph de Luca which he holds of Hamo Godchep in the parish of St. Mildred in the Ward of Bredstret. On hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Cordewanerstrete, Vintry and Queenhithe, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on the preceding Wednesday the said John de Chartres together with William de Wodeford and Johanna de Crougestere his wife had supped in the house which the said William and Johanna held in Melkstrete the said William, John and Johanna a little before midnight entered the said hostel in order to remove and take away certain goods lying therein as previously arranged between them, and when they had arrived at the hostel and had opened and forced divers doors, chambers, coffers and chests, and removed divers goods, it repented the said John to have done it, and perceiving this, the said William asked the said John to go into the kitchen of the hostel to light the fire, and when the said John came there and was on his knees to light the fire the said William, with the assent and assistance of the said Johanna of malice aforethought mortally struck the said John on the back of his head with an axe called "belte" <sup>2</sup> which he carried in his hand, no one else being present, so that he broke the skull on to his brain, and crushed the whole of his head so that he immediately died ; [that the said William] placed the wood and fire over the corpse of the said John to burn it, so that it was nearly consumed ; and that thereupon the said William and Johanna his wife stealthily took and carried away such goods as they could and fled, but whither they went or who received them the jurors know not, nor do they suspect any one except the said William and Johanna who have no chattels except those they carried away with them. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach the said William and Johanna when found in their bailiwick. The corpse viewed on which the felony appeared.

Wright's Voc., p. 163, identifies "the belte" with Fr. le coing (Lat. Cuneus, a wedge). Cf. Roquefort, Coingnie : Cognée, espèce de massue ; de cuneus.

5. On the death of Thomas, Clerk of the parish church of St. Dionis Bakcherche.

Langebourne

On Saturday after the Feast of St. Martin [11 Nov.] a<sup>o</sup> 16 Edward II. [A.D. 1323], a certain Thomas, clerk of the church of St. Dionis Bakcherche lay dead of a death other than his rightful death under the wall of a shop held by John de Kirkeby, barber, of William de Wrotham in the same parish, in the Ward of Langebourne. On hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Bissopesgate, Bridge and Lymstrete, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on the preceding Friday the said Thomas and John de Kirkeby were standing at dusk at the door of the said shop, the said John drew his knife called "trancheour," and, because the said Thomas had previously cited him to the Chaplain, of malice aforethought mortally struck him under the left breast, inflicting a wound an inch long and seven inches deep of which he immediately died. Thereupon the said John forthwith took flight and was afterwards captured and committed to Neugate. Being asked who were present when this happened, they say No one except those two, because it was night, nor do they suspect any one of the death except the said John. Being asked of the goods and chattels of the said John, the jurors say that he had one brass bowl and pot valued by them at 2s. 6d., three old pans worth 15d., a basin and ewer worth 16d., a pitcher (pitcherum) of tin worth 6d., five small dishes worth 3s. 6d., four towels worth 2s. 4d., one shirt (caniceam) worth 4d., three old sheets worth 18d., three blankets worth 4s., two silver rings worth 2d., three razors and a pair of forceps worth 6d., a coffer worth 8d., in cash (denariis numeratis) 7d., a chair and buffet (buffettum) worth 9d. Total 19s. 11d., for which Adam de Salisbury, the Sheriff, will answer. The corpse viewed on which the said wound appeared. Precept to the Sheriffs to safeguard the said John until, &c.

6. On the death of Thomas de Basyngstoke.

Thursday after the Feast of St. Andrew [30 Nov.] a<sup>o</sup> 17 Crupulgate Edward II. [A.D. 1323], information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs that a certain Thomas de Basyngstoke, "coureur," lay dead of a death other than his rightful death, under the wall of the house which Alexander le Taverner holds of Robert Leyre in the parish of St. Laurence in the Ward of Jewry. On hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Colmanstrete, Bassieshaw, and Chepe, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on the preceding Wednesday the said Thomas and a certain Arnald de Ware, a cobbler, were quarrelling opposite the house aforesaid before the hour of curfew, the said Arnald drew his knife called "tranchour," and feloniously struck the said Thomas therewith under the left breast, inflicting a mortal wound an inch long and an inch and a half deep, whereof he then and there died. Thereupon the said Arnald immediately fled, and was afterwards captured and committed to Newgate. Being asked who were present when this happened, the jurors say No one except those two because it was night, nor do they suspect anyone else thereof. Being asked of the goods and chattels of the said Arnald, they say that he has one brass pot, a brass pan, an iron pan valued by them at 18*d.*, a blanket, a long cloak (husciam), and two old sheets worth 12*d.*; a piece of ox leather worth 10*d.*; a chest worth 4*d.* and other utensils of the value of 6*d.*; twelve pair of shoes of bazen,<sup>1</sup> worth 4*s.* 6*d.* Total 8*s.* 8*d.*, for which John de Oxon', the Sheriff, will answer. 7. Escape of William Banastre.

On Wednesday the eve of the Conception B.M. [8 Dec.] a<sup>o</sup> 17 Farndone
Edward II. [A.D. 1323], a certain William Banastre of co. Cheshire took refuge in the church of St. Paul and on the same day confessed before the Coroner and Sheriffs that he was a robber, inasmuch as on Thursday the eve of St. Martin [11 Nov.] last passed he robbed a certain Master Robert de Chemenstre, a chaplain, of his black horse of the value of 40s., and of 35s. sterling in cash, and also of a gown of red medley<sup>1</sup> worth 20s., at Slepesdene,<sup>2</sup> co. Bucks, and refused to surrender himself to the King's peace therefor. He had no chattels and afterwards escaped.

8. On the death of Stephen de Lenne, taverner.

On Wednesday the Feast of St. Thomas [21 Dec.] the year Billyngesgate aforesaid, it happened that a certain Stephen de Lenne, taverner, lay killed in a shop on the wharf of Nicholas Crowe in the parish of St. Bartholomew [sic.]<sup>3</sup> in the Ward of Billyngesgate. On hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz.: Tower, Bridge and Langebourne, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on the preceding Monday, after the hour of curfew, the said Stephen and a certain Arcus de Rikeling of Brabant were playing at tables (ad tabulas) in the tavern of William de Staneforde, in the Ward of Douegate, and the said Stephen had won the money of the said Arcus, the said Arcus being thereby moved to anger, by false words led the said Stephen thence as far as the gate of the church of St. Magnus and of malice aforethought drew his knife called "tranchour," and struck the said Stephen on the belly under the navel causing two mortal wounds each of them one inch long and four inches deep; that, thus wounded, he went 9.—Friday after the Feast of Purification B.M. [2 Feb.] a<sup>o</sup> 17 Edward II. [A.D. 1323-4], a certain William, son of Robert de Tiffeld took refuge in the church of St. John de Walebroke and there acknowledged before the said Coroner and Sheriffs that he was a felon of the lord the King inasmuch as he had that day feloniously killed William de Athelby, skinner, with a knife called "tranchour," and refused therefor to surrender himself to the peace of the lord the King. He had no chattels and he afterwards escaped.

10. On the death of Gerard Andreu de Garbiak.

Langebourne

On Friday after the Feast of St. Agatha [5 Feb.] a<sup>o</sup> 17 Edward II. [A.D. 1323-4], it happened that a certain Gerard Andreu de "Garbiak" lay killed in a solar within the tenement of Simon de Knyardesleye, Knt. in the parish of St. Edmund the King in the Ward of Langebourne. On hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Cornhulle, Candelwikstrete and Bridge, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on the preceding Thursday, at dusk, a certain Guy "Fulberd" and Agnes his wife were sitting at supper in the house of Robert de Holewell in the said Ward, there came a certain Roger, cook of the Archdeacon of Winchester, and waylaid the said Agnes in order to take her to the said Archdeacon ; that the said Guy moved with anger on that account frequently told the said Roger to depart thence and the said Roger refused, so that a quarrel arose between them, and then came up John de Holewell, Robert de Holewell, William de Dene and Peter his servant, and drove the said Roger out of the house, and when the said Gerard Andreu came to the assistance of the said Roger at the door of the house, the said Guy "Fubert," John de Holewell, Robert de Holewell, William de Dene and Peter his servant with staves and other arms drove the said Gerard into the corner of the shop tenanted by Roger de Notynggham, cobbler, in the said Ward, and there the said John de Holewell mortally struck the said Gerard on the right side of the head with a staff called "balstaf" with the assent and assistance of the said Guy, Robert, William and Peter, so that the skull was broken into the brain ; that the said Gerard, thus hurt, went thence to the hostel of the said Archdeacon and there lingered without speaking until the morrow when he died at day-break of the aforesaid wound. Being asked who were present when this happened, the jurors say that they do not know, as it was night, nor do they suspect any one else. Being asked what became of the said John, Guy, Robert, William and Peter, the jurors say that they immediately took flight, but whither they went or who received them they know not. Being asked of the goods and chattels of the said John, Guy, Robert, William and Peter, they say that the said Robert has an old gown valued by them at 18*d.* for which Adam de Salisbury, the Sheriff, will answer, and that the said John, Guy, William and Peter have no chattels so far as they can learn. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach the said John, Guy, Robert, William and Peter when found in their bailiwick. The corpse of the said Gerard viewed, on which the said wound appeared. Afterwards the said John de Holeywell surrendered himself to the prison of Neugate.

12.—On Saturday before the Feast of St. Gregory [12 March] a<sup>o</sup> 17 Edward II. [A.D. 1323-4], a certain Robert Stode, son of William Cramphorn de Sabrichesworth,<sup>1</sup> took refuge in the church of St. Martin-le-Grand and there and then acknowledged before the said Coroner and Sheriffs that he was a felon of the lord the King, inas-much as on Sunday after the Feast of St. Michael [29 Sept.] of that year he had feloniously killed a certain Agnes, daughter of Thomas de Badele at Sobbery,<sup>2</sup> with a staff called "fagotstaf," and refused to surrender himself to the peace of the lord the King therefor. He had no chattels, and afterwards escaped.

13. On the death of Symon de Parys.

Cheap

On Monday after the Feast of Annunciation B.M. [25 March] a<sup>o</sup> 17 Edward II. [A.D. 1324], it happened that a certain Simon, son of Roger de Parys, lay killed at the end of Soperes lane in the parish of St. Pancras in the Ward of Cheap. On hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Colmanstret, Cordewanerstret and Walebrok they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on the preceding Sunday at dusk, the aforesaid Symon and a certain William de Walyngford, "brewere," were quarrelling in Chepe the said Simon with threats followed the said William up to the house which John le Brewere, master of the said William, holds of Amice atte Bordhawe in the said street; that the said William forbade the said Simon to insult him any more in his master's house, and the said William forthwith entered his chamber in the said house and sought his knife called a "twitel," and therewith dealt the said Simon a mortal blow under his left breast, causing a wound an inch long and six inches deep; that the said Simon so wounded immediately left the house and when he had arrived at the entrance of the above lane he fell to the ground and forthwith died; and that the said William was immediately taken and committed to Neugate. Being asked who were present when this happened, the jurors say Amice atte Bordhawe, John le Brewere, Alice de Walyngford, sister of the said William, William le Taborer and John de Oseneye and no others, nor do they suspect any one of the death except the same William de Walyngford. Precept to the Sheriffs to safe-guard him until, &c. The corpse viewed, on which the said wound appeared.

14. On the death of Hugh de St. Alban.

Aldresgate

On Thursday in Easter Week a<sup>o</sup> 17 [Edward II A.D. 1324], information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs that a certain Hugh de St. Alban, carpenter, lay dead of a death other than his rightful death, in the house of Richard de Rothyng, "carpenter," in the parish of St. Botolph in the Ward of Aldresgate. On hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that ward and of the three nearest wards, viz. : Castle Baynard, Farndone and Crepulgate they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that on the preceding Thursday before the hour of Vespers the said Hugh placed a ladder at the gate of Sir Roger de Waltham in the Ward of Castle Baynard and went up it for the purpose of working there, and that when he got to the top of the gate, no one else being present, he fell by accident to the ground and fatally broke his head ; that he was carried thence by his friends to the aforesaid house of Richard de Rothyng and there had his ecclesiastical rights and lingered until the Tuesday following when he died before the hour of Vespers of the accident aforesaid and of no felony, nor do they suspect anyone thereof, but only the accident. The ladder appraised by the jurors at 4 pence, for which John de Oxon' the Sheriff will answer.

On Thursday after the Feast of SS. Philip and James [1 May] Farndone a<sup>o</sup> 17 [Edward II., A.D. 1324], information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs that a certain John, son of William de Burgh, a boy five years of age, lay dead of a death other than his rightful death, in the rent of Walter de Hengham in the parish of St. Sepulchre in the Ward of Farndon Without. On hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz.: Castle Baynard, Aldresgate and Bredstret, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on the preceding Monday at the hour of Vespers the said John was in the house of Richard le Latthere in the same parish, and had taken a parcel of wool and placed it in his cap (capicium), Emma, the wife of the said Richard, chastising him, struck the said John with her right hand under his left ear, nobody else being present, so that he cried; that, on hearing this, Isabella his mother raised the hue and carried him thence to the place where he lay dead, and where he lingered until the hour of curfew of the same day, when he died of the blow and not of any felony.
 Being asked what became of the said Emma, the jurors say that she forthwith fled, but where she went or who received her they know not. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach her when found in their bailiwick. Afterwards the said Emma surrendered herself to the prison of Neugate.

16. On the death of John le Belringere.Douegate

On Friday the morrow of the Ascension [24 May] the year aforesaid [A.D. 1324], it happened that a certain John le Belringere lay dead in the high street of Douegate before the gate of the house held by Roger de Haveryng of Benedicta Box in the parish of All Hallows at the Hay in the Ward of Douegate. On hearing this, the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Vintry, Bridge and Walebroke, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on the preceding Thursday a certain John de Wheteley of Chester and the said John le Belringere sat playing and drinking in the said house, strife arose between them, so that the said John de Wheteley drew his knife called a "Twytel" and fatally struck the said John le Belringere therewith on the throat inflicting a mortal wound an inch and a half long and two inches deep, and when the said John le Belringere at length left the house he fell down outside the door of the house and forthwith died. Being asked who were present when this happened, the jurors say No one except those two, nor do they suspect anyone except the said John de Wheteley. Being asked what became of the said John, they say that he immediately fled to the church of All Hallows at the Hay, where the said Coroner and Sheriffs immediately came to him; that the said John confessed himself guilty of the felony and refused to surrender himself to the King's peace but asked to abjure the realm and did abjure it on Sunday the Feast of Pentecost following. He chose the port of Bristol to cross the sea in five days, viz. : the first day to Wicombe, the second to Oxford, the third to Hegheworth,<sup>1</sup> the fourth to Malmesburi, and the fifth to Bristol, thence to cross the sea at the first tide under penalty prescribed. and about the knees and thighs; that the said John Culling rescued the said Henry de Honylane, William Wygeyn, William Cok, Thomas le Messenger and Richard the servant of Thomas de "Noretone" so that the country was unable to attach them; that the said Henry thus hurt was taken by his friends to be medically treated and there had his ecclesiastical rights; that he lingered until Friday after the Feast of St. Faith [6 Oct.] when he died about midnight of the aforesaid beating. Being asked who were present when this happened the jurors say they do not know. Being asked what became of the said Henry, William, William, Thomas and Richard the jurors say that they immediately fled, but whither they went or who received them they know not, nor do they know of their goods or chattels, nor do they suspect any one else. And the said John was captured by Benedict de Fulsham, the Sheriff, and committed to Neugate. Precept to attach the others when found in the bailiwick.

4. On the death of Gerard le Fruyter.

On Wednesday before the Feast of St. Luke [18 Oct.] a<sup>o</sup> Bredstret 18 Edward II. [A.D. 1324], information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs that a certain Gerard le Fruyter lay killed in the entrance of the house of Robert le Bret in the parish of St. Peter in the Ward of Bredstret [sic]. On hearing this, the said Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz.: Chepe, Cordewanerstret and Crupulgate, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when on the preceding Tuesday after the hour of Vespers, a certain John de Wodenhale, pepperer, met the said Gerard before the shop which Hugh de Brandene holds in the said Ward of Bredstret, angry words arose between them because of an already existing rancour, and at length the said John drew his knife called "anelaz,"<sup>1</sup> and fatally struck the said Gerard therewith on the left side of his belly, inflicting a wound an inch long and five inches deep; that the said Gerard went thence to the place where he died of the said wound. Being asked who were present when this happened, the jurors say that owing to the number of passers-by they could not learn their names. Being asked what became of the said John, the jurors say that he forthwith fled, but whither he went or who received him, they know not, nor do they suspect any one else of the death. Of goods and chattels he had none so far as the jurors could learn. Being asked who first found the corpse the jurors say Phillipa wife of the said Gerard who raised the cry so that the country came. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach the said John when found in their bailiwick.

9. On the death of Elyas, son of William del Park, "mazoun."

On Monday after the Feast of St. Martin [11 Nov.] a° 18 Edward II. [A.D. 1324], information given to the aforesaid <sup>1</sup> Aymer de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, who died in 1323. He had been placed in confinement by Flemish merchants as security for money owing to them by Edward II.—Stubbs's 'Const. Hist.' ii. 532.

Coroner and Sheriffs that a certain Elyas, son of William del Park of Styvintone lay dead of a death other than his rightful death within the Tower of London. On hearing this they proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of the same Ward and the three nearest Wards, viz. : Billingesgate, Alegate, and Portsoken, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that when about mid-day of the said Monday a certain John, son of William de Park of Styvintone of co. Beds., and the said Elyas, his brother, working in the Tower, quarrelled and fought, and the said Elyas, striking the said John with a staff, drove him up to the Tower wall by the Thames, with intention of killing him, the said John thus pressed against the wall drew his knife called "trenchour," and therewith struck the said Elyas on the breast, inflicting a mortal wound an inch and a half long and penetrating to the heart, whereof he immediately died. This done he mounted a certain bretask<sup>1</sup> on the wall and thence dropt into the ditch, and took refuge in the church of St. Katherine's Hospital<sup>2</sup> in the Ward of Portsoken, where he confessed the felony before the said Coroner and Sheriffs, and refused to surrender himself to the King's peace. Precept to the men of the Ward of Portsoken to safeguard him until, &c. Being asked who were present when the felony was committed, the jurors say No one except those two, nor do they suspect any one except the said John, who has no chattels. Being asked who first found the corpse, they say Roger del Park, brother of the said John and Elyas who raised the cry, &c., and he is attached by Henry de Scrof and Andrew le Porter. 19.—On Tuesday after the Feast of St. Matthias [24 Feb.] a<sup>o</sup> 18 Edward II. [A.D. 1324-5], a certain Robert Flemyng of the county of Surrey, fled into the church of St. Mary de Aldermanne-buri, and on the following Thursday confessed before the said Coroner and Sheriffs that he was a King's felon, inasmuch as about the Feast of the Nativity of St. John Bapt. [24 June] a<sup>o</sup> 14 Edward II. [A.D. 1321], he had feloniously killed Roger Herne de Bokham,<sup>2</sup> co. Surrey, in the High Street between Bokham and Guldeford. He refused to surrender to the King's peace, and precept was issued to the men of the Ward of Bassieshawe to safeguard him until, &c. Afterwards, viz. on the following Tuesday, he escaped. His chattels consist of a red<sup>3</sup> hakeney worth 40 pence, for which Benedict de Folsham will answer.

20. On the death of John de Hamertone.Farnden

Monday after mid-Lent a<sup>o</sup> 18 Edward II. [A.D., 1325], a certain John de Hamertone lay dead in the church of St. Peter de Wodestret in the Ward of Farndone. On hearing this the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the four nearest Wards, viz.: Cordewanerstret, Chepe, Crupulgate and Bredstret, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that on the preceding Sunday at the hour of Compline a certain William de "Wydyngtone" de Westwall and Robert, son of Walter de Glouc [estre], Knt. and the above John de Hamertone were quarrelling together in Chepe at the Broken Seld<sup>1</sup> (atte seldam fractam) and fought with knives and other weapons so that the said William struck the said John in the belly, through the middle of the body, with his knife called "Irishknuf," mortally wounding him, and the said Robert struck the said John on the head and left arm with a weapon called a "misericorde" inflicting two mortal wounds; that the said John so wounded fled to the church aforesaid, and, sounding the bells, died. Being asked who were present when this happened, the jurors say there was a multitude of people whose names they knew not. Being asked what became of the said William and Robert, the jurors say that the said Robert was taken by Benedict de Folsham and was committed to Neugate and that the said William forthwith fled, but whither he went or who received him, they know not. Touching the goods and chattels of the said William, he had none so far as they could learn. Being asked who first found the corpse, the jurors say it was William the sub-clerk of the church of St. Peter aforesaid and he raised the cry so that the country came, and was attached by Ralph le Flynt and Richard Skonbergh. Precept to the Sheriffs to safeguard the said Robert, &c., and to attach the said William de "Whitingtone" when found in their bailiwick.

22. Robert le Bakere, cook.

Thursday after mid-lent a<sup>o</sup> 18 Edward II. [A.D. 1325], a Abjur' certain Robert le Bakere, cook, son of Robert le Maltmongere of Norhamtone, fled into the church of St. Mary de Wolcherch and confessed before the Coroner and Sheriffs that he was a thief, inasmuch as on that day, together with a certain William le Fisshere, of London, he had robbed a certain Robert le Say de Dadintone,<sup>1</sup> of 31 pence, of which the said Robert received 18 pence for his share. On the following Friday he abjured the realm choosing the port of Dover whence to cross the sea in four days, viz. : the first to Derteford, the second to Newentone, the third to Canterbury, and the fourth to Dover. Chattels none.

23. On the death of John Fuatard.

On Tuesday, after the Feast of Annunciation, B.M. [25 March] Aldresgate a<sup>o</sup> 18 Edward II. [A.D. 1325], it happened that a certain John Fuatard lay killed in the garden of the Priory Church of St. Bartholomew, in the parish of St. "Butulph" in the Ward of Aldresgate. On hearing this, the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz.: Farndone, Crupulgate, and Castle Baynard, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that on the preceding night, the said Fuatard and Isabella [ ] his mistress, stealthily entered at midnight the aforesaid garden over a wall of earth, and entered the close of Richard de Rothinge, carpenter, in the said Ward, and feloniously broke into his house and stole divers goods, viz.: an axe, a "twybil," a blanket, two sheets, and a basket with its contents, and threw them over the wall; that Thomas de St. Alban, a servant of the said Richard, perceiving this, rose from his bed and followed them with a cry, and when the said John and Isabella saw him coming, the said Isabella fled, whilst the said John and Thomas fought together for some time, the former refusing to surrender himself alive; that at length, the said Thomas finding the "twybil" at his feet seized it and therewith struck the said John on the head and throat inflicting five mortal wounds of which he immediately died; that the said Thomas raised the cry and remained on the spot until the Coroner arrived, when he surrendered to the King's peace and was committed to prison by Benedict de Folsham, the Sheriff. The said Isabella fled as far as Mogwellestret,<sup>1</sup> where she was captured by the same Sheriff and committed to Neugate.

27. On the death of Gilbert de Aldenham.

Farndone

On Monday in Easter Week, a<sup>o</sup> 18 Edward II. [A.D. 1325], it happened that a certain Gilbert de Aldenham lay dead of a death other than his rightful death, in a certain solar in the rent of William de Caustone, in the parish of St. Vedast, in the Ward of Farndone Within. On hearing this, the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Crepulgate, Aldresgate and Bredstret, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that on Sunday before the Feast of the Annunciation B.M. [25 March] last passed at the hour of Vespers, the said Gilbert and certain companions came to the house of William Wynter in Holebourne to arrest Thomas de Aldenham, and search divers chambers in the said house without the consent of the said William ; that thereupon a quarrel arose, and the said William struck the said Gilbert on the right side of the head with a weapon called a " fauchon," inflicting a wound three inches long and reaching to the brain.

For further information the enquiry was adjourned until the following Sunday, the Sheriffs being ordered to summon a similar jury of the neighbourhood of Holbourne where the felony was committed.<sup>1</sup> On that day the jurors say that on the aforesaid Sunday before the Feast of Annunciation, the aforesaid Gilbert,

At the Itter held at the Tower in 1244 the Chamberlain (i.e. the Coroner) and Sheriffs were blamed for having held an inquest, two years before, in the place where the corpse was found and not in the place where the deceased was wounded.—Liber Albus, i. 106.

William le Perler, Richard Bokeskyn, and Richard de Arderne, tailor, came to the house of William Wynter in Holebourne and quarrelled with him so that the said Gilbert de Aldenham threw the said William Wynter to the ground; that seeing this the aforesaid Richard "Bukkeskyn," servant of Richard "Bukkeskyn," drew a "misericorde," and whilst trying to strike the said William struck the said Gilbert on the head inflicting a mortal wound three inches long and reaching to the brain; that the said Gilbert, so wounded, returned to the house where he lay dead, and there lingered until Easter, having had his ecclesiastical rights. Being asked who were present when it happened, the jurors say that there were the aforesaid William, Gilbert, William, Richard, and Richard, and no others, nor do they suspect any one except the said Richard. Being asked what became of the said William and Richard Bukkeskyn, the jurors say that the said William Wynter was taken by Benedict de Folsham and committed to Neugate, but the said Richard fled, whither they know not. Chattels none. Precept to the Sheriffs, to safeguard the said William, &c.

parish of All Hallows on the Cellars,<sup>1</sup> in the Ward of Douuegate. On hearing this, the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Candelwykstrete, Bridge, and Walebroke, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that on the preceding Sunday, at the hour of Vespers, the said Thomas de Kirkeby and a certain Joyce de Spaldinge were quarrelling in the aforesaid church [sic], when the said Thomas drove the said Joyce therefrom up to the stone wall of Ydonia de Leyre, striking him with his fist on the face and drawing his knife; that thereupon the said Joyce drew his knife called an "Anlaz"<sup>2</sup> and fatally struck the said Thomas therewith on the left side of the breast, inflicting a mortal wound an inch long and eight inches deep; that the said Thomas with drawn knife pursued the said Joyce to kill him, as far as the street of "la Roperie," and was thence carried by his friends to the place where he was found dead, and where he lingered without speaking until nearly sunset. Being asked who were present when this happened, the jurors say there were Robert, the Rector of the Church of All Hallows the Less (omnium Sanctorum Minorum), and Richard, Clerk of the said Church, and no others, nor do they suspect anyone except the said Joyce. Being asked what became of him, they say that he surrendered to Thomas de Kent, Serjeant to the Mayor, and was afterwards committed to prison by John de Caustone, the Sheriff. Being asked who found his corpse they say a certain John de Derby who raised the cry so that the country came.

found upon him, died there his rightful death. The corpse viewed, &c.

44. On the death of Nicholas Crabbe.

On Monday after the Feast of Nativity B. M. [8 Sept.] the same year [A.D. 1325], it happened that Nicholas Crabbe of Flanders lay killed on the wharf called "le Wullewarf"<sup>1</sup> in the parish of All Hallows de Berkyngchurch in Tower Ward. On hearing this, the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz. : Billinygesgate, Langburne and Alegate, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors say that on the preceding Sunday, after the hour of Vespers, the said Nicholas and a certain John "Paling" of Flanders were quarrelling on the aforesaid wharf, when the said Nicholas drew his knife called "anelaz" and therewith wounded the said John four times on the throat and neck and pursued him with intent to kill him as far as the water of the Thames; that at length the said John drew his knife called "trenchour," and therewith struck the said Nicholas under the left breast to the heart so that he immediately died. Thereupon the said John fled into the church aforesaid, and there confessed his felony before the Coroner and Sheriffs, and refused to surrender himself to the king's peace. Being asked who were present when this happened, the jurors say there were John le Waterberere and John Whitheved who raised the cry so that the country came. Being asked of the goods and chattels of the said John and Nicholas, they say that the said Nicholas had none, so far as they could learn, and that the said John had a sur-coat and a shirt valued by them at 6 pence, for which John de Caustone will answer. Precept to the Sheriffs to take the said John as soon as he be found out of sanctuary.

the said church of his wounds and of no other felony.

45.—Inquest taken before John de Ileford, the Coroner, and John de Caustone and Benedict de Fulsham, the Sheriffs, to enquire on the oath of good and lawful men of the Wards of Farndone, Castle Baynard, Bredstret and Aldrichesgate, what malefactors broke the King's prison of Neugate, and other particulars. The jurors say that on Saturday the eve of the Nativity of B.M. [8 Sept.] a<sup>o</sup> 19 Edward II. [A.D. 1325], about midnight, Adam Nouneman of Hoklive,<sup>1</sup> co. Beds, John Gommere, Robert de "Molseleye," John de Elme, Alan Mariot and John de Parys, approvers, Stephen de Keleseye, William le Soutere, Walter, son of Beatrice Gomme, and John de Bedewynde feloniously broke prison and escaped through a hole in the western wall ; that of these, the said John Gommere, Robert de "Molseye," John de Elme, Alan Mariot and John de Paris were recently captured by the warders of the prison and neighbours and brought back to prison ; that Adam Nouneman, William le Soutere, Walter, son of Beatrice Gomme, and John de Bedewynde fled into the church of St.
Sepulchre in the Ward of Farndone, and Stephen de Keleseye into the church of St. Bride in Fletstret. They further say, that William Broun of Ireland, Richard de Leycestre, William de Codenorde and Adam Waleys, approvers, Simon Herlewyn

Nicholas le Fremason, John May, Thomas de Chacombe and John Vintsoutz abetted the felony. Being asked as to the goods and chattels of the aforesaid Adam Nouneman, Stephen de Keleseye, William le Soutere, Walter, son of Beatrice Gomme, and John de Bedewynde, the jurors say that they had none so far as they could learn.

The above Nouneman and John de Bedewynde confessed their felony before the Coroner and John de Caustone and asked to abjure the realm, which they did on Monday after the Feast of Nativity B.M. aforesaid, the port of Dover being given to the said Adam, in four days, viz. : the first to Dertford, the second to Newentone, the third to Canterbury and the fourth to Dover, thence to cross the sea at the first tide ; and the port of Suthampton being given to the said John in four days, viz. : the first to Coveham,<sup>1</sup> the second to Farnham, the third to Aleresford, and the fourth to Suthampton thence to cross the sea at the first tide.

On Saturday the Feast of Exaltation of H. Cross [14 Sept.], the aforesaid William le Soutere son of William le Lede of co. York, and Walter, son of Beatrice Gomme, acknowledged their felony, and asked to abjure the realm, which they did the same day, the port of Dover being assigned to the said William in three days, viz. : the first to Shingledewell, the second to Osprenge and the third to Dover, thence to cross the sea at the first tide, and the port of Suthampton being assigned to the said Walter in four days, viz. : the first to Coveham, the second to Farnham, the third to Winchester and the fourth to Suthampton, thence to cross the sea at the first tide, &c.

32. On the death of Thomas de St. Alban.

Alareshgate

On Sunday before the Feast of St. John Bapt. [24 June] the same year, information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs that Thomas de St. Alban, cobbler, lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in a shop held by him under Ralph de Blithe in the parish of St. Agnes in the Ward of Aldresgate. Thereupon they proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz.: Bredestrete, Crepulgate and Farndone Within, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors—viz.: John le Bole, William de Warewyk, William de Saunford, Robert de Clackton, Roger de Woxebrigge, John de Leycestre, Roger Doun, Peter de Excestre, Richard Rolf, John Shep, Thomas le Carpenter, John Roger, Thomas Friday and Robert de Gloucestre of the Ward of Aldresgate; John de Kent, carpenter (faber) John de Gisburgh, "tighlere," William Bainard, Thomas de Wallingford, John de Stebenhuth, "lokyere," and John Borgiloun of the Ward of Bredestrete; Ralph Trewe love, Reginald de St. Quintin, Stephen le Bokeler, John de Chiggewell, Geoffery de Hidyngham, "bakere," and John de Redenhale of the Ward of Crepulgate; John atte Berne, Richard Kyng, John de Stafford, Henry le Sherman, John de Galeweye and William le Clerk of the Ward of Farndone Within—say that on Sunday before the Feast of St. Barnabas at the hour of curfew Thomas de St. Alban, cordwainer, was standing at the door of his shop in the parish of St. Agnes within Aldresgate when he saw James de Shordich and Thomas de Walpol, goldsmiths, coming from Chepe towards Aldresgate with swords and bucklers in their hands, and taking them to be misdoers and disturbers of the King's peace he attacked them with a staff and struck the said Thomas de Walpol to the ground; that seeing this, the aforesaid James drew his sword and therewith struck the said Thomas de St. Alban on the back of the head inflicting a wound an inch and a half long and penetrating to the brain, and also another wound on his right side four inches long and two inches deep, and a third wound on his left arm near the hand three inches long and half an inch deep; that the wounded man entered his shop where he had his ecclesiastical rights and lingered until Saturday before the Feast of Nativity of St. John Bapt. when he died of his wounds about sunset; that the said Thomas de Walpol got up and fled before the felony, and the said James was seized by the Sheriffs' officers and taken to Neugate.

Thereupon the jurors asked a day so as to make further enquiry, and Sunday after the Feast of St. John aforesaid was given them. On that day the jurors say that on Sunday before the Feast of St. Barnabas [11 June] the said Thomas de St. Alban, cordwainer, was standing at the door of his shop at the hour of curfew, when he saw William de "Stormuthe" and Thomas de Walpol approaching Aldresgate with swords and bucklers, and when opposite his shop the said Thomas de St. Alban struck the said Thomas de Walpol to the ground; that the latter immediately rose and with his sword struck the said Thomas de St. Alban on his left arm near the hand inflicting a wound three inches long and half an inch deep and immediately fled, but whither they (the jurors) know not; that William de "Stormouth" thereupon struck the said Thomas de St. Alban with his sword on the back part of his head and another wound on his right side as aforesaid, and also fled, but whither, they (the jurors) know not. Chattels none. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach the said felons and four nearest neighbours.

 de Wynterton, Martin le Palmere, John Ballard, Peter de * * * William Clerband, Thomas de Aysse, Robert atte Colnere and Philip de Thornby—say that on the preceding Thursday the said Elias being drunk and the tide being out, ascended the mast of his vessel by a rope, and on his way down he accidentally fell and immediately died. They attribute his death solely to his drunkenness and the rope, and, further, find that neither the ship nor anything belonging to it was moving or being moved except the rope, which they appraise at 10s., for which William de Brykelesworth, the Sheriff, will answer.

14. On the death of Alice, wife of Robert de Portesmouth, “saltstondere.”<sup>1</sup>

Monday the Eve of St. Thomas Ap. [21 Dec.] the same year, Queenhithe information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs that Alice, wife of Robert de Portesmouth, “saltstondere,” lay dead of a death other than her rightful death in the rent of Richard le Rous in the parish of St. Michael, in the Ward of Queenhithe. Thereupon they proceeded thither, and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the Ward of Vintry, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors—viz. :

John de Dytton, John de London, tapicer, Thomas de Ledrede, Geoffrey de Salopia, barber, John de Essex, cordwainer, Henry de la Marche, Henry le Keu, and Ralph de Bernys of the Ward of Queenhithe; William de Lyncoln, John le Pynner, Walter le Coupere, John atte Lee, and Adam le Dyeghere of the Ward of Vintry—say that on the preceding Sunday after the hour of curfew, a quarrel arose between Robert de Portesmouthe and Alice his wife in a solar in the rent of Richard le Rous, when the said Robert struck his wife with a staff called “wombedstaf” on the neck as she stood by the stair in the said solar, so that with the blow she fell down the stair and broke her neck; that the said Robert took flight the next day, but whither, &c., the jurors know not. And because information was given to the Coroner, that Robert son of the aforesaid Robert de Portesmouthe had been arrested on suspicion of causing the death of the said Alice his step-mother and had been taken to Neugate, precept was issued to the Sheriffs to summon other jurors of the Ward of Queenhithe for the following Tuesday in order that further enquiry might be made. Accordingly on that day there came John de Kyngestone, Henry de Holmes, Nicholas de Lambheth, “coupere,” Henry de Farnham, cordwainer, Roger de Derby, “saltmetere,” Richard le Rous, William de Neuport, Richard de Ware, Hugh Filz Rogier, Richard de Stanford, Richard atte Cornere, Geoffrey le Chaundeler, and John Beneyt, who said on oath that on the aforesaid day the said Robert, the son, struck the said Alice with his hand, whilst the father struck her with a “wombedstaff” on the neck from which blow the said Alice died, and that the death of the said Alice was not hastened by the blow from the hand of the said son. The corpse viewed, the neck of which was seen to be broken by the blow of the staff. The chattels of Robert the father, who had fled, appraised by Hugh Filz Rogier, Richard le Rous, John de Dittone, Roger de Derby, Henry de la Marche, “taillour,” and Thomas Curteys, viz.: an old “curtepy” and coat of green cloth for a woman at 2*s.* 6*d.*, two old coats at 18*d.*, a brass pot at 3*s.*, an old blanket at 20*d.*, a sur-coat for a man 12*d.*, an old sur-coat for a woman at 2*s.*, a piece of fur at 12*d.*, an old chest at 4*d.*, a staff called “wombedstaff” at 1*d.*, firewood and a barrel at 12*d.*, a

On the aforesaid Saturday, the above Peter Tremenel, in the church of All Hallows de Berkyngcherche, confessed his felony before the Coroner and Sheriffs, and said that he was so badly wounded that he could not leave the church except at risk of death, but was prepared to submit to the will of the King's officers when he recovered his health. The said Peter appeared to be very badly wounded.

38. On the death of John Bone, "dyeghere."

Monday after the Feast of St. Bartholomew [24 Aug.] the same Billing[esgate] year, information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs that the above John Bone lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in a well (fonte) in the rent of Gregory atte Shire in the parish of St Andrew de Estchepe, in Billingsgate Ward. There-

39. On the death of Ralph Turk.

Bridge

Monday after the Feast of St. Bartholomew [24 Aug.] the same year, information given to the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs that the above Ralph Turk, servant of John Turk, fishmonger, lay dead of a death other than his rightful death in the rent of the said John Turk, in the parish of St. Magnus in Bridge Ward. Thereupon, they proceeded thither and having summoned good men of that Ward and of the three nearest Wards, viz.: Walebroke, Douuegate, and Candelwykstrete, they diligently enquired how it happened. The jurors—viz.: William Walkerne, John Cotekyn, James atte Pirye, Henry atte Beche, John atte Gate, William

Gandre, Reginald le Furbour, and Richard Anable of Bridge Ward; John le Neve, Robert de Hatfeld, John le Clerk, Richard Fox, John de Bissheye, Henry le Neve, and John le Neve, junior, of the Ward of Walebroke; Henry de Prestone, Thomas de Ispania, Hugh de Spaldyngge, Roger de Waltham, Henry de Stystede, John atte Gotere, John de Waltham, William de Chesham and John de Bandone of the Ward of Douuegate; William atte Noke, Adam de Canefeld, John Lemman, Richard de Herford, John de Walworth and William de Colkyrk of the Ward of Candelwykstrete—say that on Wednesday the morrow of St. Peter ad vincula [1 Aug.] a° 14 Edward III. [A.D. 1340], after dinner, John de Oxon', skinner, servant of Robert de Eynsham, skinner, assaulted Nicholas le Leche, "pessoner," in Walebrok opposite the shop of the said Robert on account of an old quarrel, and that thereupon Ralph Turk, Robert Halpeny and Simon Haunsard, fishmongers, came to the assistance of the said Nicholas whilst John de Cornubia, called "Lyttle Jakke," servant of Gilbert de Bosenham, skinner, and certain others of the same mistery, names unknown, came to the assistance of the said John de Oxon', and that the said John de Cornubia struck the said Ralph Turk on the top of the head with an instrument called "polax," inflicting a mortal wound of which he died on the following Sunday. They further say, that John Kaynel, "taillour," came to the assistance of the said John de Cornubia with a staff, but did not use it. The said John de Cornubia and others of his company, names unknown, immediately fled, but whither, &c., the jurors know not. They further say that John de Oxon' was the chief cause of the felony, and he was captured and taken to Neugate. Being asked if the said John struck the said Ralph or not, the jurors say Not, but that he began the quarrel which caused Ralph's death, and more than that they cannot learn. Precept to the Sheriff to attach the said John de Cornubia, the felon, and the rest of his company, when known, also John Kaynel, Robert Halpeny and Simon Haunsard who were present and four nearest neighbours.

And inasmuch as the quarrel in which the said Ralph Turk was wounded originated between John de Oxon' of the mistery of Skinners, and the said Nicholas le Leche of the mistery of Fishmongers,<sup>1</sup> precept was issued to the Sheriff to summon an inquest of the best, richest and wisest men of the mistery of Skinner's for the following Wednesday, and a like inquest of the mistery of Fishmongers for Thursday next, in order to enquire more fully into the death.

Second inquest taken before the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs on the death of the said Ralph Turk on Wednesday after the Feast of St. Bartholomew [24 Aug.] the same year. The jurors—viz.: William de Cave, R * * * de Carleton, Thomas de Farnham, John de Bedeford, Walter Page, Simon Rote, John Trappe, Elias Dy * *, Hugh de Seynt Ned, William de Wyrcestre, Richard de Stykeneye, Robert de Eynesham, Richard de Lyncoln, Laurence Sely, Simon de Pulham, Robert de Seynt Johan and Walter de Cornewaile of the mistery of Skinners—say that on the Wednesday aforesaid, after dinner, Geoffrey Horn, skinner, servant of Robert de Stodham, skinner, struck the said Ralph Turk in the High Street of Walebroke, opposite the shop of Robert de Eynsham, with an instrument called a "sparth,"<sup>2</sup> inflicting a mortal wound on the back of the head, penetrating the brain, whereof he immediately died. The said Geoffrey took flight, but whither, &c., the jurors know not. No chattels. The said "sparth" was afterwards found in the house of Robert de Stodham and was appraised at 6*d.*, for which Roger de Forsham, one of the Sheriffs, will answer. Being asked if the said Robert abetted the felony, the jurors say No. Precept to the Sheriffs, &c.

Third inquest taken before the aforesaid Coroner and Sheriffs

An enquiry as to this affray and another which took place on the same day in Bridge Street in which Andrew Aubrey, the Mayor, the Sheriffs and their officers were assaulted, had been already held by the Sheriffs in the presence of John de Shirlourne, the Coroner, on Thursday after the Feast of St. Peter ad Vincula [1 Aug.], no fewer than five different juries being summoned. — "Pleas and Memoranda," Roll A 3, memb. 15. 15 dors.

On the same day at a Congregation of the Mayor, Aldermen and Sheriffs and an "immense commonalty," Thomas, son of John Haunsard, and John le Brewere, "portour," who were found guilty of the assault upon the Mayor, were beheaded in Chepe near the Stone Cross. — "Hust. Common Pleas," Roll 64, memb. 30.

4.—Inquest held before Nicholas Symcok, Coroner of London, Nicholas Twyford and Andrew Pykeman, Sheriffs of the City, on Wednesday after the Feast of Annunciation B.M. [25 March] a<sup>o</sup> 1 Richard II. [A.D. 1378] on the death of Thomas Ballard of Clyve co. Kent,<sup>2</sup> “shipman,” whose body was found the same day submerged in the water of the Thames and thrown by the tide on to the land between the Hospital of St. Katherine near the Tower and a water-mill called “Crashemelle” in the parish of St. Botulph in the Ward of Portsokne. The jurors drawn from the said Ward and the Ward of Billyngesgate where the said Thomas was said to have fallen into the water, and from two other nearest Wards, viz.: Tower and Algate—William Stoill, Richard Morecok, Robert Warde, John Scarlet, Eustace Westwode, <sup>1</sup> For the evidence brought forward by the civic authorities in 1428 to prove that the Tower of London and St. Katherine's Hospital were in the liberty of the City, see ‘Cal.’ Letter-Book K,’ pp. 81-3.

<sup>2</sup> Cliffe.

John Greyland of the Ward of Portesokne; John Elys, John Lutone, Henry Avenaunt, John Wodeham, junior, Simon Westone "chaundeler," Simon Sherman of the Ward of Billyngesgate; William Rydere of Tower Ward; John "Cadelle" and John Imberdene of the Ward of Algate—say that on Tuesday after the Feast of St. Gregory [12 March] the same year, one hour after noon (post nonam) the said Thomas Ballard was carelessly standing upon a manure heap on Billingsgate Wharf in the parish of St. Mary atte Hulle, and was trying to unfasten an empty boat called "cokbot" moored there, when the heap fell in from weak foundation, and he was thrown into the Thames and was drowned. His body was carried by the stream to the place where it was found. The corpse viewed, &c. The jurors further say that the boat was not moving and was not the cause of the death, but only the insecure bottom of the manure heap, which was of no value, and therefore the boat ought not to be forfeited to the King. Precept to the Sheriffs to attach four of the nearest neighbours of the Ward of Portesokne where the said Ballard was discovered dead.

Robert Ward attached by John Elys and John Lutone.

John Greyland, by Henry Avenant and John Wodham.

Thomas Clark, by Simon Westone and William Prichet.

John Scarlet, by William Ryder and John "Cadele."
